JEWSLETTER OF NOTTM & DISTRICT TRADES UNIO

Whilst we are all familiar with some "difficult" employers, I am sure none of us would want to come across the response which the double glazing firm "Synseal Extrusions Limited" has given to the ISTC (Iron & Steel Trades Confederation) trade union who are seeking recognition for their members who represent more than 50% of the Synseal workforce, in accordance with the law. Synseal is based at Common Road in Huthwaite, Notts.

The Chairman of Synseal, Gary Dutton, has threatened to shut down the business after 20 years and put 250 jobs on the line rather than recognise a trade union in his company. He is quoted in the Chad newspaper (18/5/00) as saying that management would not saying that workers were well aware of the have promoted the union at Synseal" zero-tolerance attitude management are taking and the consequences that their support for the ISTC could have. "They have three options. Firstly they can accept the facilities that are existing within the company at the present time. Secondly, we will listen to any of our workforce because they are important to us. If they are unhappythey can speak to any manager as an individual or request a meeting with any of the executives or senior management. And the third option is that they can seek alternative employment. If everyone thinks Continued Page 2

With more than his threat to close the business by saying that half the workforce having joined ISTC, he is if staff "do join an outside union, and as a bound by law to recognise the union which result that union becomes recognised by would mean meeting union representatives legislation, they will run the risk of the to discuss and reach agreements on matters owners becoming dismayed and protecting of importance to the workforce such as pay, their interests by withdrawing their fiscal overtime and other contractual issues on a support. And the responsibility will rest regular basis. Mr Dutton is also quoted as squarely on the shoulders of the people who

> Speaking on behalf of the ISTC Nigel Venes was quoted in the Chad as saying that "we are not an outside body, we are an inside body, people at Synseal joined the union. We are not seeking confrontation but if he wishes to be confrontational we will react. We are seeking to improve things such as health and safety in the workplace that workers have said they want us to improve. Mr Dutton's attitude belongs firmly in the past. He is an example of why there is a need for unions".

NATIONAL FRONT MARCH IN NOTTINGHAM.

jumping Sarah Payne for it - the National Having Front. distributed a leaflet in parts of Nottingham showing a picture of Sarah Payne, and with the pithy slogan "Hang all child abusers", the NF went on to explain how they intended to march on Bank Holiday Saturday (August 26) from the City Centre to Nottingham Prison, where special units house paedophile offenders.

NF's "national" The mobilisation on the day was pathetic. A bunch of obvious-looking Nazis (one of their chants was "The Reds, the Reds, we're going to get rid of the Reds" - a well-known anti-paedophile chant!), numbering 25-30, were all that turned up on the day, with no support from the areas through which they marched. Around 100 anti-fascists throughout the day mobilised both in the City Centre and outside the prison, resulting in a lastminute decision by the police to ban the NF march round the City Centre. However, the NF were then allowed to assemble on the Forest Recreation Ground (located in an area with the highest density of black population in Nottingham), under heavy police protection.

By this time, anti-fascists diverted from the Market Square and the prison had also assembled by the Mansfield Road entrance to the Forest. A Section 60 order gave police the power to search all of us present, plus they refused to allow anyone from the anti-fascist counter-demonstration to leave a defined area on the pavement of Mansfield Road. However, the National Front were allowed to march to the prison via Hucknall Road under police escort, although anti-fascist

The latest bunch demonstrators attempting to disrupt the of sick opportunists march as it set off were eventually on the repelled by mounted police. demonstrators Nevertheless, bandwagon is - wait manage to occupy the area outside the prison prior to it being reached by the NF march, and despite further attempts by the police to push us back, the NF had to make do with a "rally" some way down the road from the prison. The police then publicly held us on Perry Road to allow the NF march back down the route they had come unhindered. Even local residents, some with young children, who had joined us were not allowed to move until the NF had been returned safely to the Forest.

> A number of questions are raised by these events. For a start, the NF could not have marched without the co-operation and protection of the police. Given that police were drafted in from South Yorkshire, how do you feel about that money (which is, after all, yours) being spent to protect a bunch of nazis? Of course, the people who granted permission for the NF to march in the first place were Nottingham City Council, presumably acting in the best interests of its electorate. Press releases widely distributed by the Notts Anti-Fascist Alliance (NAFA) giving advance notice of the event were ignored by local and national press. Literally thousands of leaflets were distributed by NAFA and extensive fly-posting by the Anti-Nazi League pulled in a respectable number of people to oppose the NF march, but not enough to stop it; a few more people, and that would have been a real possibility.

If you want to affiliate/donate to the Nottinghamshire Anti-Fascist Alliance, they'll be pleased to hear from you. You can contact them at PO Box No192, Nottingham NG1 1FJ. Speakers are available to attend union meetings on request.

Despite the positive aspects to what happened on the day, the fact that the NF managed to have a march at all has given them a boost, with wildly exaggerated claims about the march appearing in their propaganda. The NF have had a presence on and off in Nottingham over the past few months, but the labour movement has largely failed to react. Maybe its time that we realised that the NF are vehemently anti-union and conducted have numerous attacks on trade unionists over the years. We must be prepared to mobilise against the fascists whenever needed - and however sad a bunch they are.

Next meeting of Notts Anti-Fascist Alliance

Monday 25 Sept 7.30pm upstairs in the Newcastle Arms, on the corner of North Sherwood Street in Nottingham.

This September thousands of people from across Europe will be protesting on the streets of Prague, in the Czech Republic, against a meeting of the international Monetary Fund (IMF), which will be taking place in the city

The IMF is a major global capitalist institution. It exists in order to facilitate the mass exploitation of the world's resources and people by profit hungry multinational companies. It does this by imposing 'Structural Adjustment Programmes on the countries of the ex-colonial world and Eastern Europe. In plain English, this means opening up these countries' economies to western banks and corporations The brutal policies of privatisation and deregulation that the IMF prescribes for these economies are responsible for throwing millions into workers and poor unemployment and poverty.

At its Prague conference, the IMF will be planning the implementation of more of the same policies for workers and poor throughout the world

However, the sort of policies pushed by the IMF are not going unchallenged. They have provoked mass resistance in many countries. For instance, in Bolivia an attempt by the government in April to privatise the water industry met with an uprising of the rural poor and mass protests of tens of thousands of workers that culminated in a general strike.

Come to Prague on 26th September and join the protests against the IMF and its policies as well as to the capitalist system they serve.

■ Dudley Health branch had won a ballot to take industrial action over plans to transfer over 500 UNISON members to a private company, Summit Healthcare. There was an 85%vote for strike action and 93% vote for a work to rule in a ballot that had a very big turnout.

Since last summer Dudley Health branch has repeatedly asked the employer to renegotiate the project to exclude staff from transfer. This option was made available in a change to government regulations. The trust is refusing to change its plans. Mark New Joint Branch Secretary said " There is no good reason to transfer the staff. Our members are very worried that their pay, conditions will be and terms undermined in the private sector. They already work hard for poor pay. Yet they are proud to work for the NHS and want to continue to do so."

The Private Finance Initiative (PFI) is about the privatisation of public services. Under PFI the private sector will be involved in designing, building financing and owning buildings, especially hospitals. Hospital trusts will have to make payments to the private sector consortiums over a long period, of 30 years or more, at a high rate of interest. PFI is like the public sector paying a mortgage to private companies without even owning the hospitals at the end of the mortgage repayment process.

PFI was introduced by the Tory government in 1992 and was taken over enthusiastically by Labour in 1997. It is clear that under any fair comparison of costs between the private sector and the public sector, it would be obvious that PFI would be more expensive and the extra cost of using private capital would mean that services would have to be drastically cut.

A History Of British Socialism

Max Beer

Max Beer's History is a classic, not only because it was a brilliant pioneering study, but also because it is still urgently relevant to a new generation of socialists. Just as Beatrice Webb complained that her comrades has "borrowed" it, while Tawney celebrated it in a justly famous essay, so today there are many who will treasure its radical insights into the ideas of these British thinkers, many of whom have long been ignored or forgotten in most of our schools and some of our universities. Politics in modern Britain will make more sense to those who really study this book. This illustrated edition carries Tawney's original foreword to the first English edition, with a new introduction by Ken Coates.

Recognition Campaign at Daybrook Laundry

Workers at Daybrook Laundry could be among the first to win recognition under the law, if their union's carefully organised campaign delivers its expected result.

Daybrook Laundry based in Nottingham employs around 300 workers. Terms and conditions are not considered to be good, worker dissatisfaction has been high and the attitude of the management is not seen as supportive.

Last year a group of workers approached the T&G, asking for help to win improvements. T&G had no problems in recruiting members: 170 workers have joined since October 1999.

The union has produced a newsletter for the workers called Bubbles, which allows the union to keep the union in the forefront. It details successful individual cases where the union has supported members in the workplace and it regularly publishes details of the company's finances.

On 14 June, just a week after the law was introduced The T&G put in a claim for recognition, making it one of the first to be registered under the law. Article edited from Labour Research Bosses of privatised care homes in Sheffield have been forced to hold back on the pay cuts they have been trying to force on care workers. After a public campaign by the Sheffcare Workers' Action Group, the trade unions have presented a report rubbishing Sheffcare's justification for the pay cuts.

The breathing space will allow the unions to step up pressure on the company by continuing the public campaign and pushing ahead on the ballot for industrial action.

■ Barbie Linsey, the building union UCCAT rep sacked for trade union membership, won her case for unfair dismissal at an industrial tribunal in July. But she was only awarded £4,800, after a nine year unblemished record working for the same company. They could have awarded £50,000.
