Who needs laws? Rich bastards need laws for the protection of accumulated wealth, power and property. Laws are the toecap on the boot of the rich. We are led to believe that the laws we are forced to obey were made by our elected leaders in our own interest. Many of the laws still in existence were made before wimmin and males under 21 were allowed to vote, and the laws made today are made by an elitist minority in order to protect their elitism. The 'law of the land' is the law of the landed gentry. Over the last few years a number of laws have been brought in to strengthen the position of the ruling classes (!) These include laws to limit the power of the individual worker to take some control over his/her own life (ie the right to strike) and an increase of powers given to the police in order to keep down the ordinary citizen (ie the SUS laws and Public Order Act). Of course the provision of acts in an attempt to solidify control of the elitist few does not only come from the Conservative Party. The Labour Party has also used its governmental power in ways designed to control the very people it claims to represent (ie the Trespass Law of 1977). In effect your freedom to oppose any government of this country has been removed. As long as we sit on our fat backsides and let these people think for us, make decisions for us and tell us how to run our lives we will know no freedom or individuality. Do you think it's right that a rapist gets only 4 years (usually suspended), depositing litter in an improper place can get you a fine of £100 (though industrial estates, oil tankers, Sellafield etc. pour far more dangerous substances into our rivers and seas every day, thousands of DHSS snoopers are employed to investigate people trying to stay above the breadline, while millions is swindled as the market fails to 'police itself'). Do you think it's right? Of course you don't, but you can't do anything about it (otherwise you will be arrested!) Do judges have higher morals than you? Are the police the only ones with a sense of right and wrong? The fuck they are! Make your own decisions, take back the power, judge everyone equally. The only law is human nature!

'IN VIEW OF YOUR DEPRIVED BACKGROUND, DEPRIVED ENVIRONMENT, AND DEPRIVED SOCIAL CONTEXT, IT SEEMS ONLY FITTING THAT YOUR PROPERTY SHOULD ALSO BE DEPRIVED... AND CAN'T YOU DATE BOB IN THE STREET AGAIN'

Once upon a time there was a crippled newspaper seller who lived in Exeter. He believed in God. He believed in truth. He also realised that the government of his day did not. So, in a moment of frivolous jollity he decided to take the piss out of them & published the following parody of the Lord's Prayer:

'Our Lord who art in the Treasury, whatsoever be thy name. Thy power be prolonged, thy will be done throughout the Empire, as it is in each session. Give us this day our usual sops, & forgive us our occasional absences on divisions, as we promise to forgive them that divide against us. Turn us not out of our places but keep us in the House of Commons the land of pensions & plenty, & deliver us from the people. Amen

For his efforts he was rewarded with 9 months for blasphemy 6 months for sedition & had his entire stock burned.

Once upon a time there was also a newspaper which printed the story of Joe Bloggs a milkman whom they alleged took part in a sex & drugs orgy.

For their efforts the newspaper had record sales. To his embarrassment Joe was shunned by his friends, he was sacked & his life was destroyed. All he had done was deliver milk to a disreputable house in the town. There was nothing he could do to defend himself.

Libel operates solely to protect the rich & does so more blatantly than other branches of the law; you cannot get legal aid either to defend or initiate a libel action. You've gotta have loads of spare cash to get caught up in a libel case (& doesn't Jeffrey Archer know it)

Even if what you print is true if it's considered defamatory you can be sued for libel.

Blasphemous libel was meant to 'protect God & religion from scurrilous attacks' but as the man from Exeter found out it is there to protect the government. Although it is considered an archaic law it is still enforced when the government feels threatened; for example in 1977, Gay News were convicted of blasphemy & Crass in 1979 were threatened with being accused of blasphemy after writing 'Asylum'

Sedition however protects those state parasites the Royal Family, along with the government, from having nasty things said & written about them. If you print anything - even in humour - which is likely to turn public opinion against them or cause people to take the law into their own hands, whether through peaceful means or violent means, you can be taken to court for sedition.

The people who made these ridiculous laws made the others too. Governments protect themselves & not the people.

All laws are made to protect a minority & their interests.

By obeying their laws you are allowing them to control your lives. Your mute acceptance of the laws with which they trap you only helps to strengthen the grip of the vice in which you are held.

But then I hear the cry 'If we don't have laws what will there be to stop rape & violence & murder? If there's no police force to protect us who will?'

IN reply: When has the law ever protected us from rape & violence & murder?

If communities stick together, if people show real concern for what is going on around them & sort out anyone who steps too far out of line & causes harm to others a police force is not necessary; it is possible for people to look after each other without the need for a system of laws imposed to protect only those with the most to lose.

Law to the rich is a case of protect & survive - if they don't hide the truth under a corrupt system of so called justice then they would be unable to control the masses.

BUT THE WRITTEN LAW MUST EXIST FOR THE DEFENCE OF THE CITIZEN, WITHOUT LAW THERE WOULD ONLY BE CHAOS! This is the perpetual claim made by the individual who will listen only to what the media will tell him, the media controlled by those same laws it so proudly supports (except of course when the law works against it's most important job of placing commercial interests first ie the Spycatcher affair) when will Joe Public allow his eyes to see through the transparent lies they print.

The laws of this land are not for the likes of Joe or his interests but for those in power.

As all the laws about property have no other object than to protect the unjust appropriation of human labour by certain monopolists, there is no reason for their existence. Laws on property are not made to guarantee either to the individual or to society the enjoyment of the produce of their own labour. On the contrary, they are made to rob the producer of a part of what he has created, & to secure to certain other people that portion of the produce which they have stolen either from the producer or from society as a whole.

So these laws which are professed by the state & it's tools of control (to be in the interest of the ordinary man) can be seen in their true light, useless apart from their aim to keep down the individuals claim to the rightful benefits of his labour. As these laws make up around 50% of our written laws this would make half of the laws (supposedly created for our protection) as obsolete in a free society. The new laws which have been created from nothing by the present 'democratic' government have just served to highlight this, the new laws on Trade unions have not been brought in to support the union members right of individualism but to concrete the beleif that the worker is the property of the boss, to be used in any way he sees fit.

We know very well that the mission of all governments, whatever their political ideology, is to protect & maintain by force if necessary the privileges of the classes in possession of wealth & power, be it the governmental officers the clergy or the corporate bosses. One third of our laws the laws on taxes & organisation of government departments the army, the police & the church etc have no other end than to maintain & develop the administrative machine, with this machine in turn serving the privileged & possessive classes. Analyze all these laws observe them in action & you will discover that not one is worth preserving.

In a free world there is no need

EDITOR'S VOICE

YOU'VE GOT TO HELP ME - I'M GOING TO BE SACKED!

WE'LL FORGIVE YOU FOR BEING A NASTY SCAB, AND TOGETHER WE'LL SAVE YOU FROM THE DOLS

MAYBE IF THE SCABS OF 1984/85 HAD STUCK IT OUT WITH THE REST THERE MAY HAVE BEEN SOME CHANGES !!

for the laws of sedition, no laws for taxation, & in a world without a police force there is no need for a police bill. We have seen already that the vast majority of laws are useless & therefore unnecessary. When the social revolution eventually sets us all free we see that immediately up to 5/6 of all laws are made obsolete.

So we must now turn to the laws which relate to the protection of the person, against assaults & attacks. It is often stated that these laws must be enforced to uphold the rights of individual freedom, safe from harm from unruly elements in society. It is a known fact that the vast percentage of these 'crimes' against the person are instigated by the desire to obtain possession of another's wealth. This immense class of 'crimes' will disappear on the very day that private property ceases to exist, & all wealth is distributed to all citizens for the common good.

Crimes against the person of course can take a more sinister twist when the crime is sexually motivated. Rape can only be eradicated when the values of our society are changed, when women are not treated as second class citizens to be used and abused as the male sees fit. In a free world all should be equal & the way all citizens are treated, as individuals should be of the highest concern to all of society. Without exploitation there would be no, & there must be no, violence for violence's sake.

Of course it must be understood that when society is organised in anyway, be it through state control or a society which focusses its beliefs on individuals & community freedom, there will be a certain number of individuals whose possessions are more developed & far less controlled by ourselves, whose passions ~~are more developed & far less controlled by ourselves~~ may lead them into acts of antisocial behaviour. These acts can be & justly should be rendered harmless by ourselves & the community as a whole.

It is a well known fact that the fear of punishment has never stopped a single murder. He who kills or attacks violently another for revenge or through illness does not at the time worry of the punishment he faces.

It is not the fear of violence from our so called leaders which will ensure a more peaceful society but the organisation of our society to ensure everyone has the opportunity not only for himself but for the benefit of the community as a whole. If all are ensured a sound standard of education which will be beneficial to society as a whole we shall be in no need of the gaoler or the judge. If all are brought up to value the community as a whole no member of which can be injured without the injury affecting the whole of the community then each of us can enjoy the benefits this will bring.

'NO MORE LAWS! NO MORE JUDGES! LIBERTY EQUALITY & PRACTICAL HUMAN SYMPATHY ARE THE ONLY EFFECTIVE BARRIERS WE CAN OPPOSE TO THE ANTISOCIAL INSTINCTS OF CERTAIN AMONG US!'¹

'Laws are rules, made by people who govern by means of organised violence, for non-compliance with which the non-complier is subjected to blows, to loss of liberty or to even being murdered'²

COMMON AIM

IS THERE NO LOVE CAN LINK US...???

IS THERE NO THREAD TO BIND US...???

As "anarchists" we all have a common aim...

As individuals we have our differences, unique desires and dreams.

QUESTION: Is it freedom or friction blowing in the wind? Unity-friendship-warmth? But at this moment I feel the cold. It's an uneasy breeze and it's beginning to bite.

OBSERVATION: We seem to be picking faults and criticising each others stance, mocking each others

"ANARCHY" rather than searching for warmth or setting up workable examples of what we believe. Safe in our individual clans of conformity, complete with our very own passwords-passphrases-passclothes-passjokes-passgestures etc. Is it a case of "you don't belong with me if you don't look/think like me"? Self-righteous but self-defeating! Yes, we throw as many labels around as we do insults. Purging potential friends and making them lifelong "enemies". Yet what is Anarchism? To me it means self rule, doing what you yourself think is best and not what someone else tells you. Those who so confidently slap the gauntlet across the face of another and say "you're wrong, you shouldn't do that," etc, are creating the same sort of rules they want to eradicate. Isn't it better to follow your own individual conscience rather than the mass or your safe group of friends (with their unwritten laws and rules)? Isn't that REAL choice, REAL freedom?

Of course we've got the right to comment and make judgements of what we see, and of course we should examine our actions as to whether they were successful or not. Some judgements dismiss a persons worth because of his/her view. AS a result of this we're kept alienated by differences and age-old philosophies, that for some reason cannot be bridged. Whether certain factions argue over rightist wrongs of support during the miners strike for example, or equally as relevant the pros & cons of N.V.D.A. (in fact what ever the disput) the fact that forever links us in these issues is that we share a common enemy and have a common aim.

Historically there are many reasons for the troubles in Ireland and more recently N. Ireland. One reason often ignored by the state controlled British media is the actions of the British uniformed presence in Ulster.

Why does a 'democratic' country constantly disobey the Court of Human Rights by employing strip searches which are used not to search the suspect, but to humiliate them whether it be man or woman. On a more dangerous level the use or misuse of plastic bullets as a form of social control (great phrase that) seems to be excused by the British media and public because there exists a state of ~~XXXXX~~ civil disobedience. The strange thing is that if a paralell is drawn with the situation in South Africa the South African policies and tactics are seen as wholly disagreeable yet they may turn a blind eye to the same situation in Northern Ireland.

The British since 1969 have used plastic bullets, CS gas and even live rounds as ammunition in a small province with a population of only one & half million. Is N. Ireland really an equal part of this democratic 'United Kingdom' or just some place where her majesty's armed forces can teach a new generation of law enforcers the most efficient means of killing or maiming.

There are too many frightening examples of innocent people who have been killed or permanently disfigured because of British methods of policing eg. one small girl carrying an empty milk crate was hit by a plastic bullet, a woman looking out of her window on the top storey of a block of flats was also injured by a rubber bullet, are these people sufficiently subversive enough to be shot at?

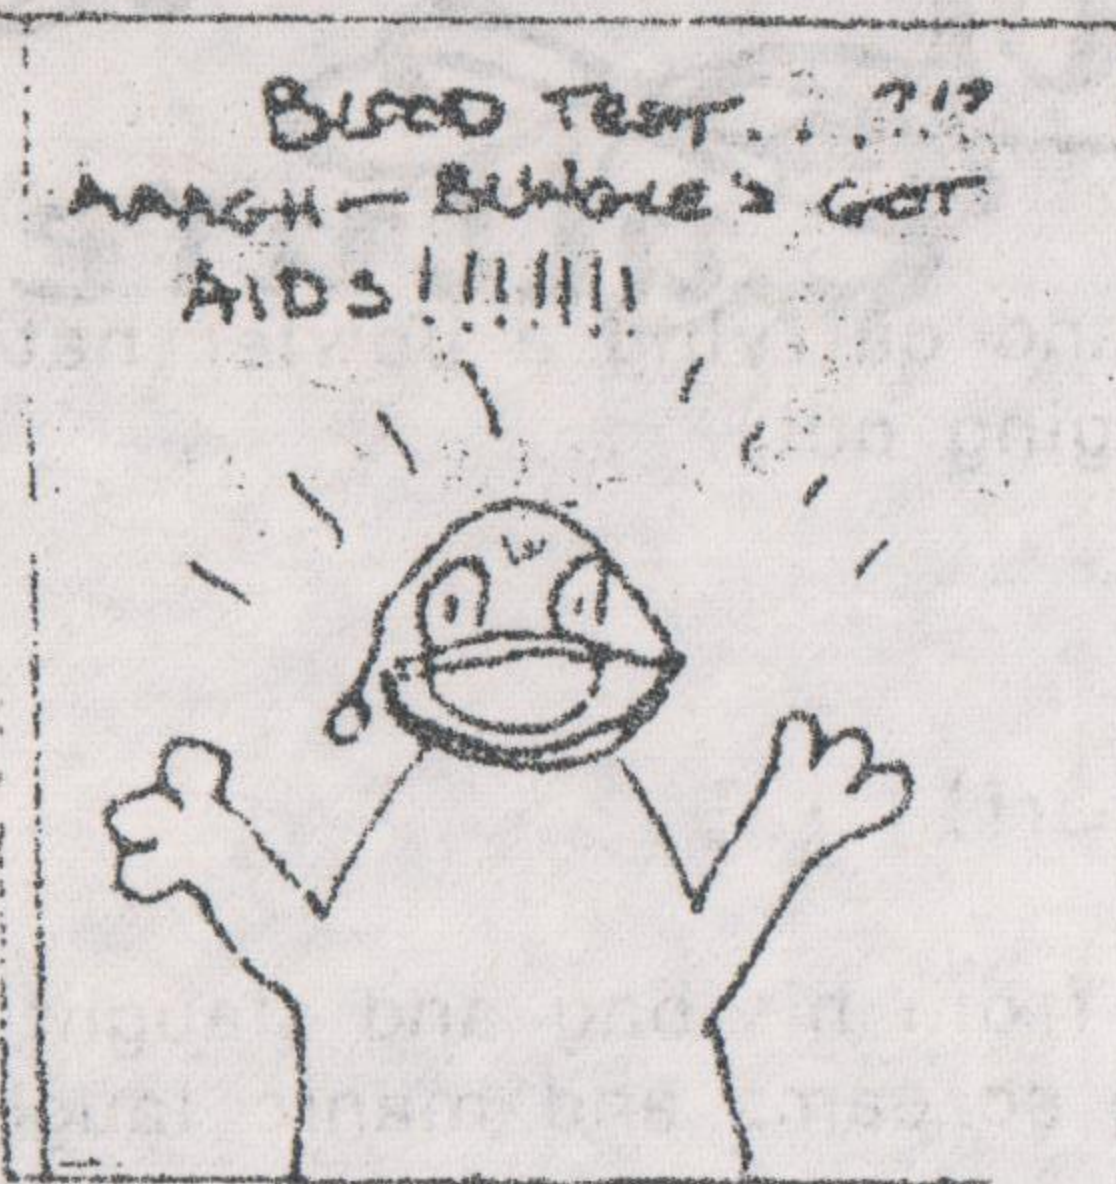

Already people have died from plastic bullet wounds because the population of not only Ireland but other parts of the world regards itself as shit.

Already the police in your area are being trained in the same methods as those serving in Ulster.

There may soon be a repeat of what happened that Sunday morning of January 1972 in Londonderry when the army was used to fire live ammunition into a large crowd killing 13 unarmed civilians, injuring countless more. Of course the soldiers responsible were not disciplined but were rewarded.

A Bit of Culture

A PLAY

1st man (wearing a briefcase and carrying a bowler hat with sandwiches hanging out)

"I hate Anarchists!"

2nd man (looking equally silly)

"Yes rather, what"

3rd man (wearing a football scarf)

"What's Anarchy?"

4th man draws a machine gun from his bag and slaughters the lot as he emits blood-curdling screams and manic laughter.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," bellows a bespectacled civil servant as he thrusts a biro into the heart of the mad machine-gunner. He recites Churchill-like speeches as he strangles the dying terrorist with red tape!

A bunch of scruffy individuals are sitting on a wall opposite, drinking Special Brew and smoking large aromatic roll-ups... giggling at the carnage and getting filthy looks from all the passers-by. For some reason the civil servant takes offence at the happy little group, untangling himself from the intestines of the terrorist he charges them, brandishing a handful of forms and screaming rules. After a brief moment of panic the group falls in unison off the wall in fits of laughter. The civil servant becomes increasingly agitated and looks mean.... Then a particularly spotty and skinny member of the group rushes to the civil servant and bellows "A've pooooooed in me pants!!!!" The bloodstained civil servant squeaks, then wild-eyed and crazy, runs like fuck!!

Anarchy now, and pass the Brew!!!

THE END

OK, for you thickos who didn't understand that marvellous piece of political drama (Jeffrey Archer eat your heart out) here's a short explanation.

Man 1 was a representation of the solid middle class. Man 2 was an upper class bastard. Man 3 was a thicko football supporter put in for authenticity. Man 4 (the terrorist) represented the classic revolutionary politician (RCP, WRP, SWP, etc) who managed to get rid of bastards 1-3. Unfortunately because of the basic deficiencies of the communist (or socialist, or Leninist, or Marxist, or Maoist) system the brave vanguard fighter falls prey to the classic enemy STATE CONTROL AND BUREAUCRACY (represented by the mad civil servant.)

which eventually spells doom for the new revolutionary state as it strangled by rules and laws laid down by its centralised leadership, who eventually become as privileged and dictatorial as the original capitalist oppressor.

The only answer to this inevitable state dictatorship is quite simply to get rid of the state and its timewasting and unproductive organisations. Humankind can live without thousands of useless rules, but only if we shed our shortsightedness and all-consuming greed and allow ourselves to be governed by our own personal laws of basic human morality.

WE HAVE FAITH IN HUMANITY.....

DO YOU HAVE THE STRENGTH TO BECOME HUMAN?

Let's not create anymore unnecessary sides and rivals. We make enemys where there should be friends, who we could work and talk with. The convictions we profess to hold should not allow such exclusivity. Put it this way, its like saying "I can't like you, you're not wearing the right shade of black!!! "ABSURD !! If you think about it, its easy to judge others when standing outside. Its like seeing only half a person, or that person in shadow. But what about the inside We dont share their unique views and experiences or way of interpreting things and vica-versa How can we truly get to know each other like this, with so many divisions? This sea of hostility and sneering elitism keeps us apart and no-one wants to swim the gap for fear of drowning. So in our separate groups our ideas often fall on like minds, and therefore aren't discussed or added to as they might be. Theres no time for internal feuds. Instead of isolated "forces" we could be one huge interlocking force, and what's to stop us-merely our own self imposed restrictions. All that really matters is that we follow our hearts and tread with confidence those sometimes very personal paths, without fear of being ostracised. Whatever we decide to do, be it waving a black flag, NVDA, let's keep our main aim in sight and act in unison. It can happen, it must!!!!

SPORT?WHAT EXACTLY IS IT...AND WHY DO PEOPLE DO IT?

Firstly,sport can be defined as a boring waste of time and energy.Secondly people do it 'cos they're very stupid!"But I enjoy sport" I hear you say.Yes you probably do....if you've got half a brain and sweaty armpits!!

Sport can basically be divided into two types 1)Participant and 2)Spectator.Of the two,spectator sport is definitely the most boring and morally scandalous.We have reached a position in this country where vast amounts of people spend hours sitting in their chairs or standing on draughty terraces watching a load of stupid wankers fanning about. Who enjoys wathing checked trousers and little white balls flying through Scottish skies?Who gets up at 3a.m. to watch,live from Australia, some stupid buggers throwing cork balls at each other and fending them off with bits of wood. Who gets a kick out of watching a load of men in short trousers running round a field after a ball,kissing each other,and jumping into a bath together?(Though not any more 'cos they're scared of catching AIDS)

Most terrifying,who can justify making millionaires of snooker players,paying millions of pounds for a single soccer player-when there are millions of people starving or without shelter,millions of people(many of whom actively and willingly participate in this horror)live on the poverty line in Britain. Just who the fuck are these people?They must exist,or why would the media give so much space to this blasphemy of human morality.Who ever they are they cannot possibly provide an excuse,give a reason or truly support this mind boggeling waste of money.....can they ? Participant sport is less nasty yet still as silly.People turn out in their thousands to attack projectiles of various kinds (rangeing from footballs to other peoples heads) with a mad assortment of instruments (from raquets to boots). They do this week in week out and what do they get from it ? Sweaty,tired,bruised and pissed off when they lose!! This country has been in the grip of this fitness fad for far too long.We (and all like-minded sports haters) want to see a state of laziness to sweep our once proud and idle land.

BOYCOTT ALL SPORT....BE HAPPY BE LAZY !!

THE FEDERATION OF ANIMAL RIGHTS.

At the moment there are huge numbers of people involved in the struggle for animal rights.Most of these people are members of large national groups like BUAV,Animal Aid,NAVS,etc.As a result vast quantities of cash are poured into these organisations-at present around £3m.However,the people involved in animal rights do their work through their local group.Pickets outside butchers,furriers,etc, hunt sabbing,leafletting,street collections,transport to larger events and meetings are all organised by the local animal rights group. Such groups are nearly always hard up.And yet there are huge resources in the national groups bank accounts! There it sits waiting to be spent on vital things like staff wages,designers,printers and of course,directors.But where are these people when the action starts? Busy spending your money on redecorating their offices!!Think if that money was redistributed among 30 regions.£100,000 each! With that amount of cash think what your group could do:

- open a shop selling direct to the public.Cash raised could be fed straight into campaigns,not wages
- be more effective with propoganda and hence get more people involved.
- pay for transport for sabs,have stalls,demos and other events
- computerise your information:a method that is quick,cheap, and veryconvenient.
- most of all you could really make your presence felt in your area!

All this would be very easy to achieve within a local group with careful financial control of resources.

At the moment the national organisations seem hell-bent on out doing each other. They produce their own leaflets,magazines, sales goods and posters.There is little co-operation between the groups but much duplication.There is little to smile about in this waste of money.£500,000 a year goes on wages.I shudder to think how much goes on taxes to government,where it will be spent on factory-farming, vivisection and bloodsports.

Local animal-rights groups are the backbone of the animal rights movement,and they are voluntary.

THE ALTERNATIVE: The national groups are a waste of our money.That £3m is ours and as such we must reclaim it before they spend it all(waste it all?)

Shared out across the nation we could fund a nationwide war, instead of elitist national groups.If you are a member of a national group REMAIN SO.If not then JOIN ONE!This may seem like a strange request after all I've said,but think about it.At the group's AGM you'll be in a position

At the moment there are large numbers of people involved in the struggle for animal rights. Most of these people are members of large national groups (e.g. RSPCA, etc.) as a result of large numbers of people involved in these organizations at present.

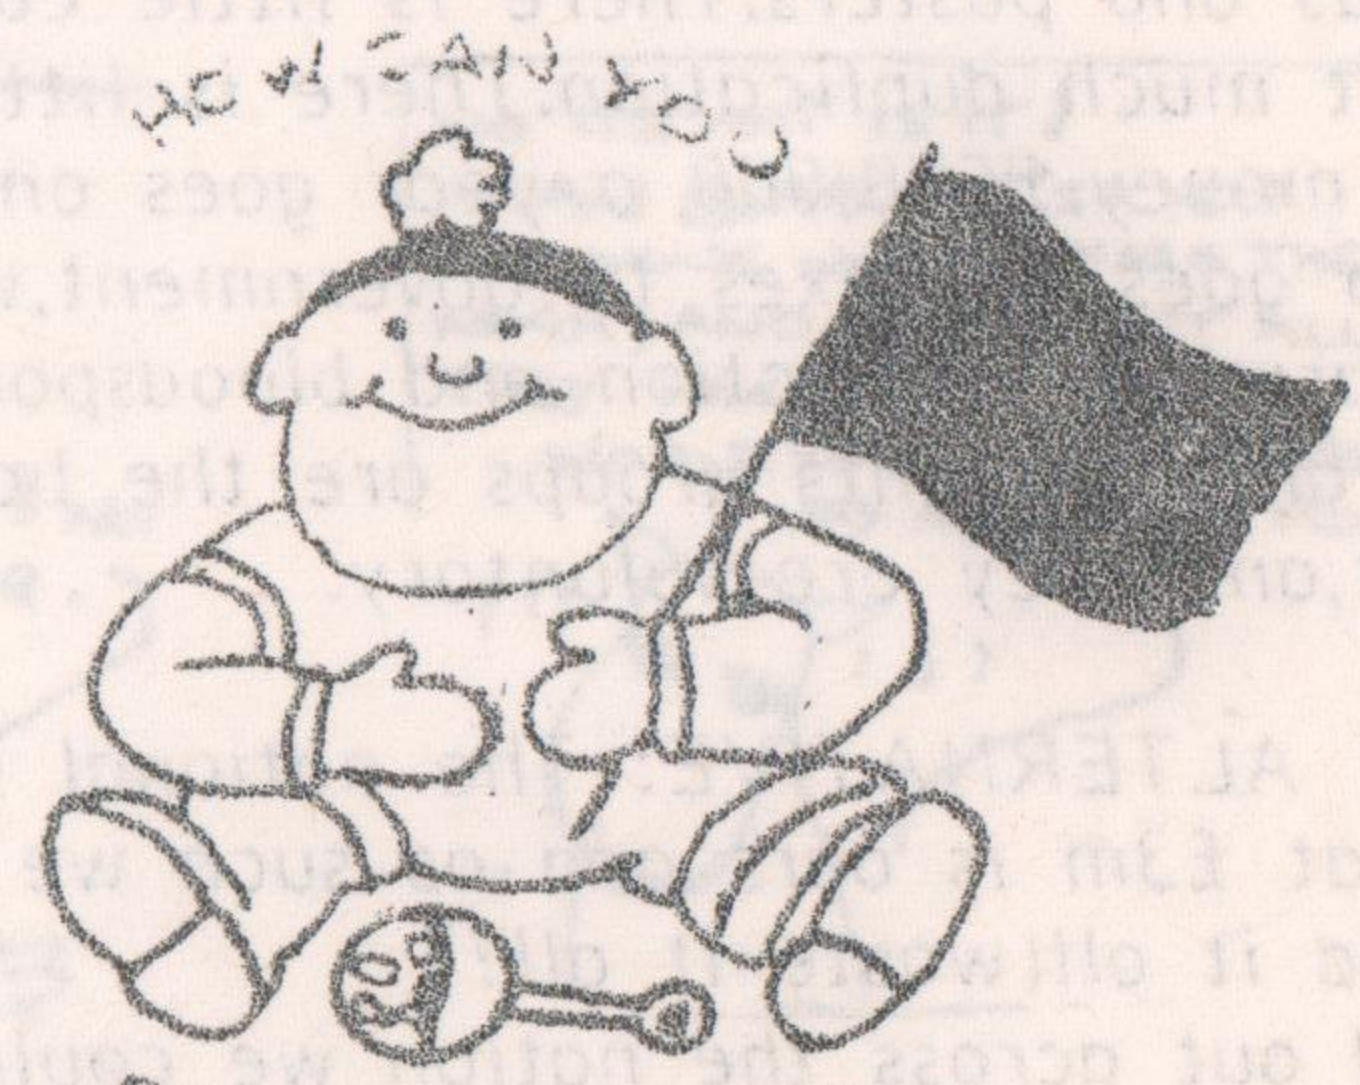

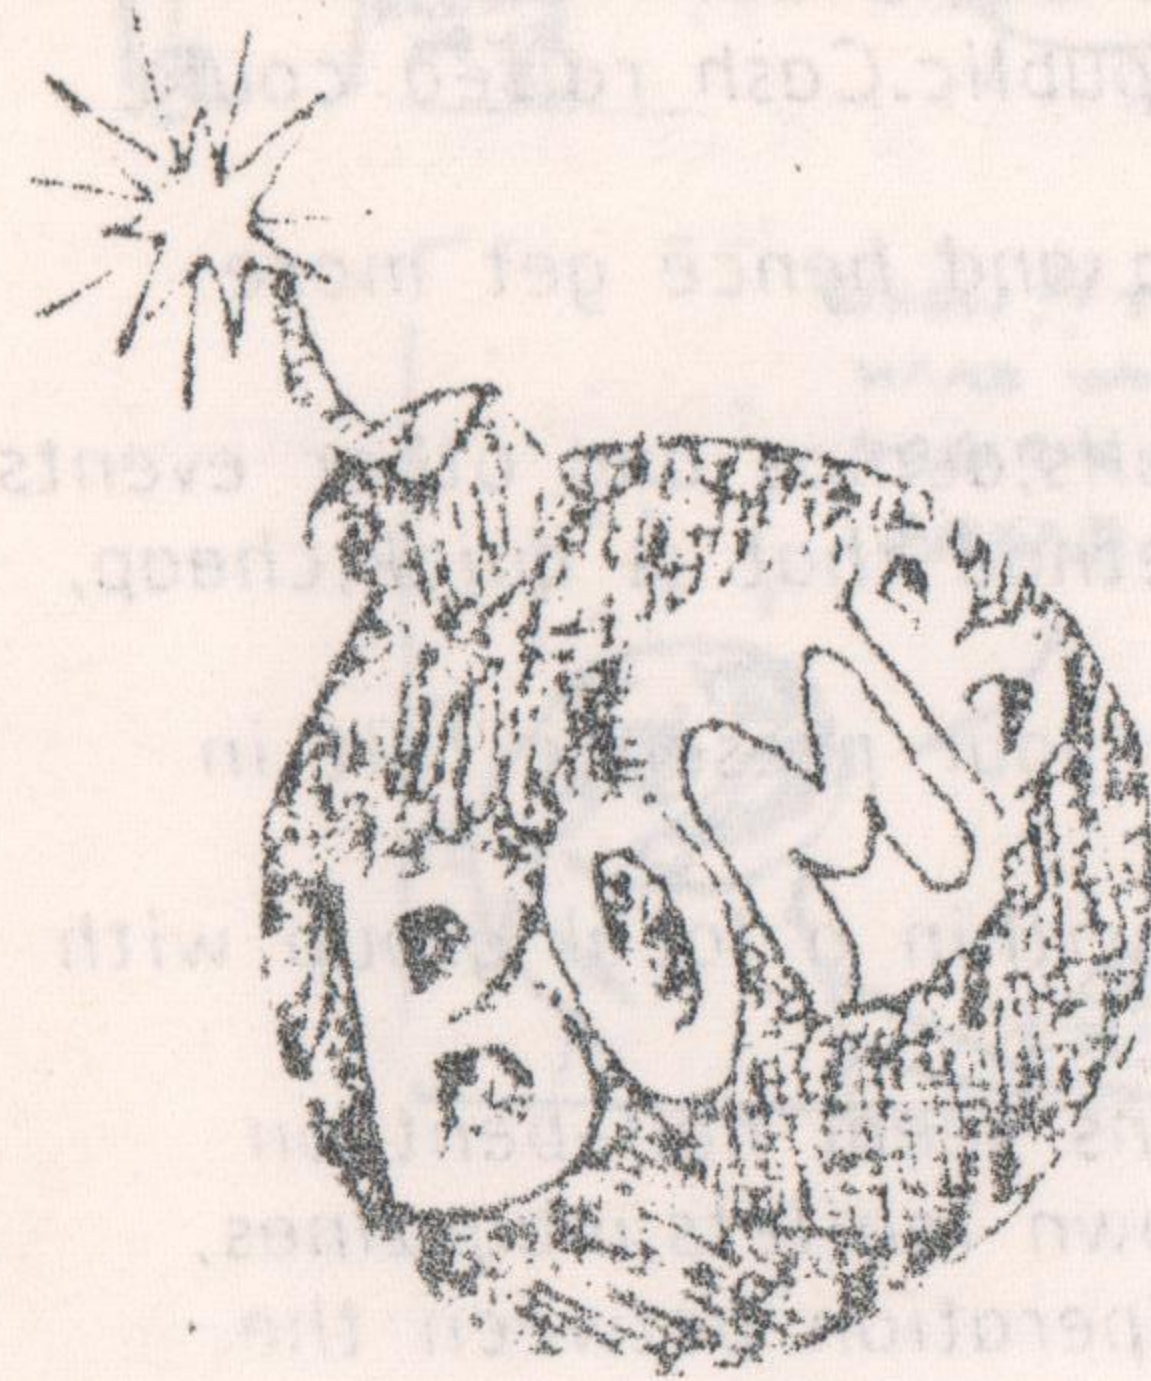

you will be in a position to vote for progressive change and help lead the way to a federation for Animal Rights. With everyone working together we will soon see the animal rights movement stronger than ever before!
