ANARCHY IN ACTION

COLIN WARD

In his new Introduction the Author writes:

'This book was not intended for people who had spent a lifetime pondering the problems of anarchism, but for those who either had no idea of what the word implied, or knew exactly what it implied and rejected it, considering that it had no relevance for the modern world.'

My original preference as a title was the more cumbersome but more accurate 'Anarchism as a theory of Organisation' because as I urge in my preface that is what the book is about. It is not about strategies for revolution and it is not involved in speculation on the way an anarchist society would function. It is about the ways in which people organise themselves in any kind of human society, whether we care to categorise societies as primitive, traditional, capitalist or communist . . .'

MARIE LOUIS BERNERI

340 pages

paperback

The author has set out to give a description and a critical assessment of the most important (not necessarily the most famous) Utopian writings since Plato's Republic. In some cases no English version existed so that the author had to make her own translations.

The book brings out in a striking way the close relationship between Utopian thought and social reality, and is of importance because it warns us of the doom that awaits those who are foolish enough to put their trust in an ordered and regimented world.

GASTON LEVAL

hardback

£2.00 plus 94p post
£4.00 plus £1.20 post

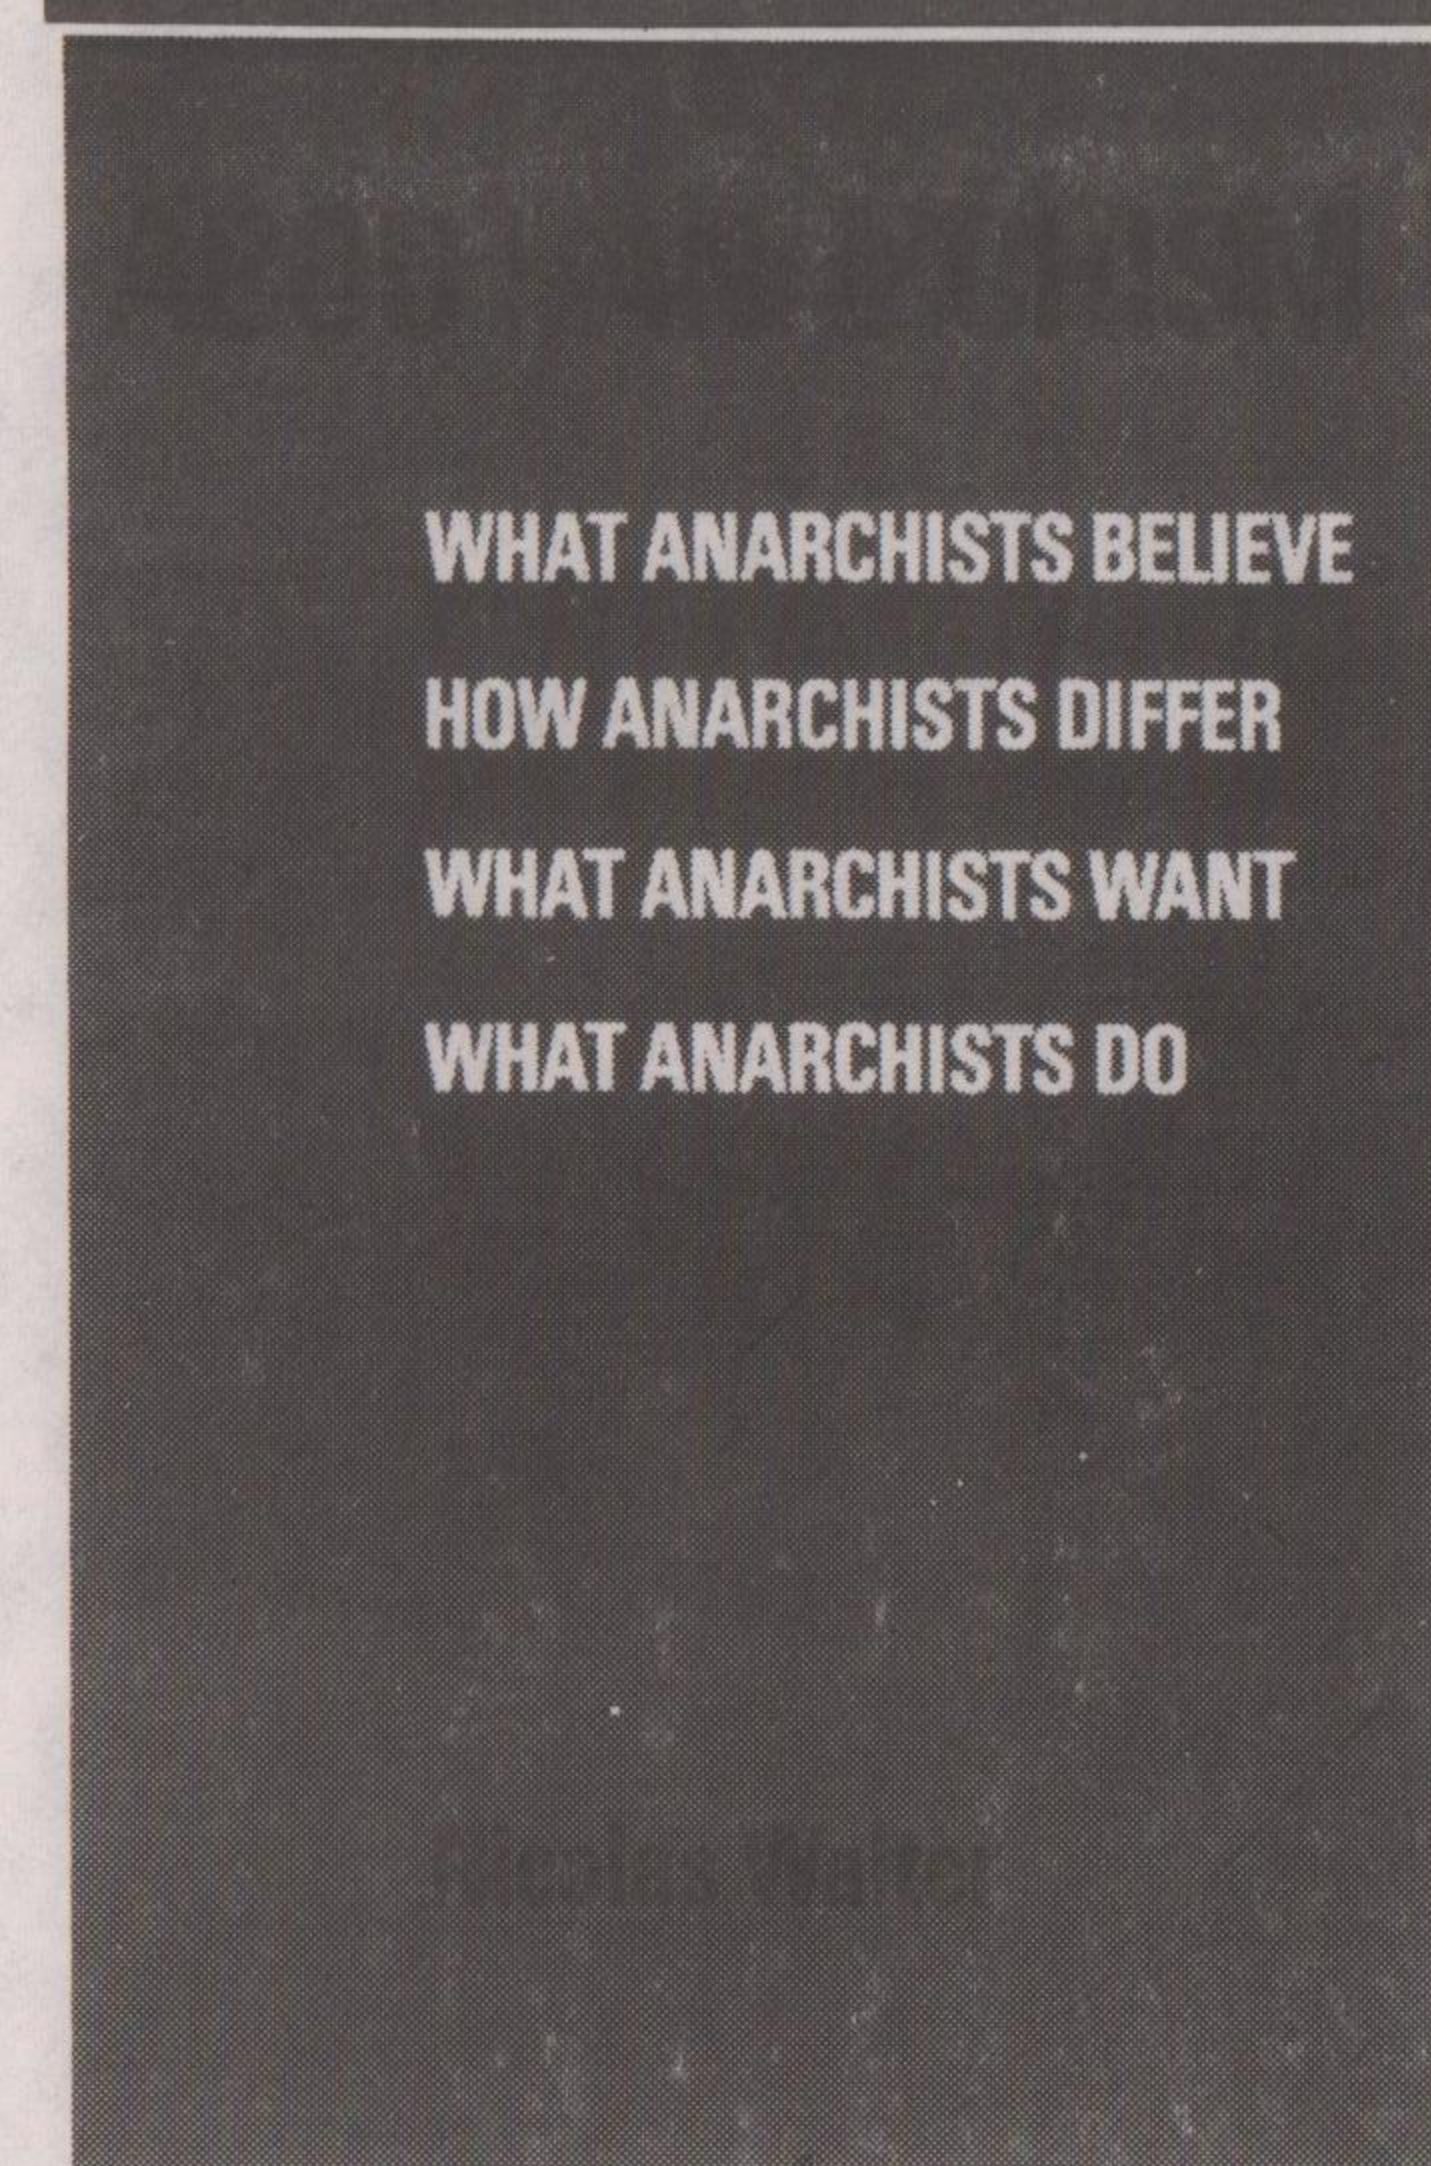

Spain in revolt! Everywhere people came together to build a new society. Leval charts the success and failures of this exciting period of mass social action and change.

VERNON RICHARDS 142 pages

paperback £1.00 plus 42p post

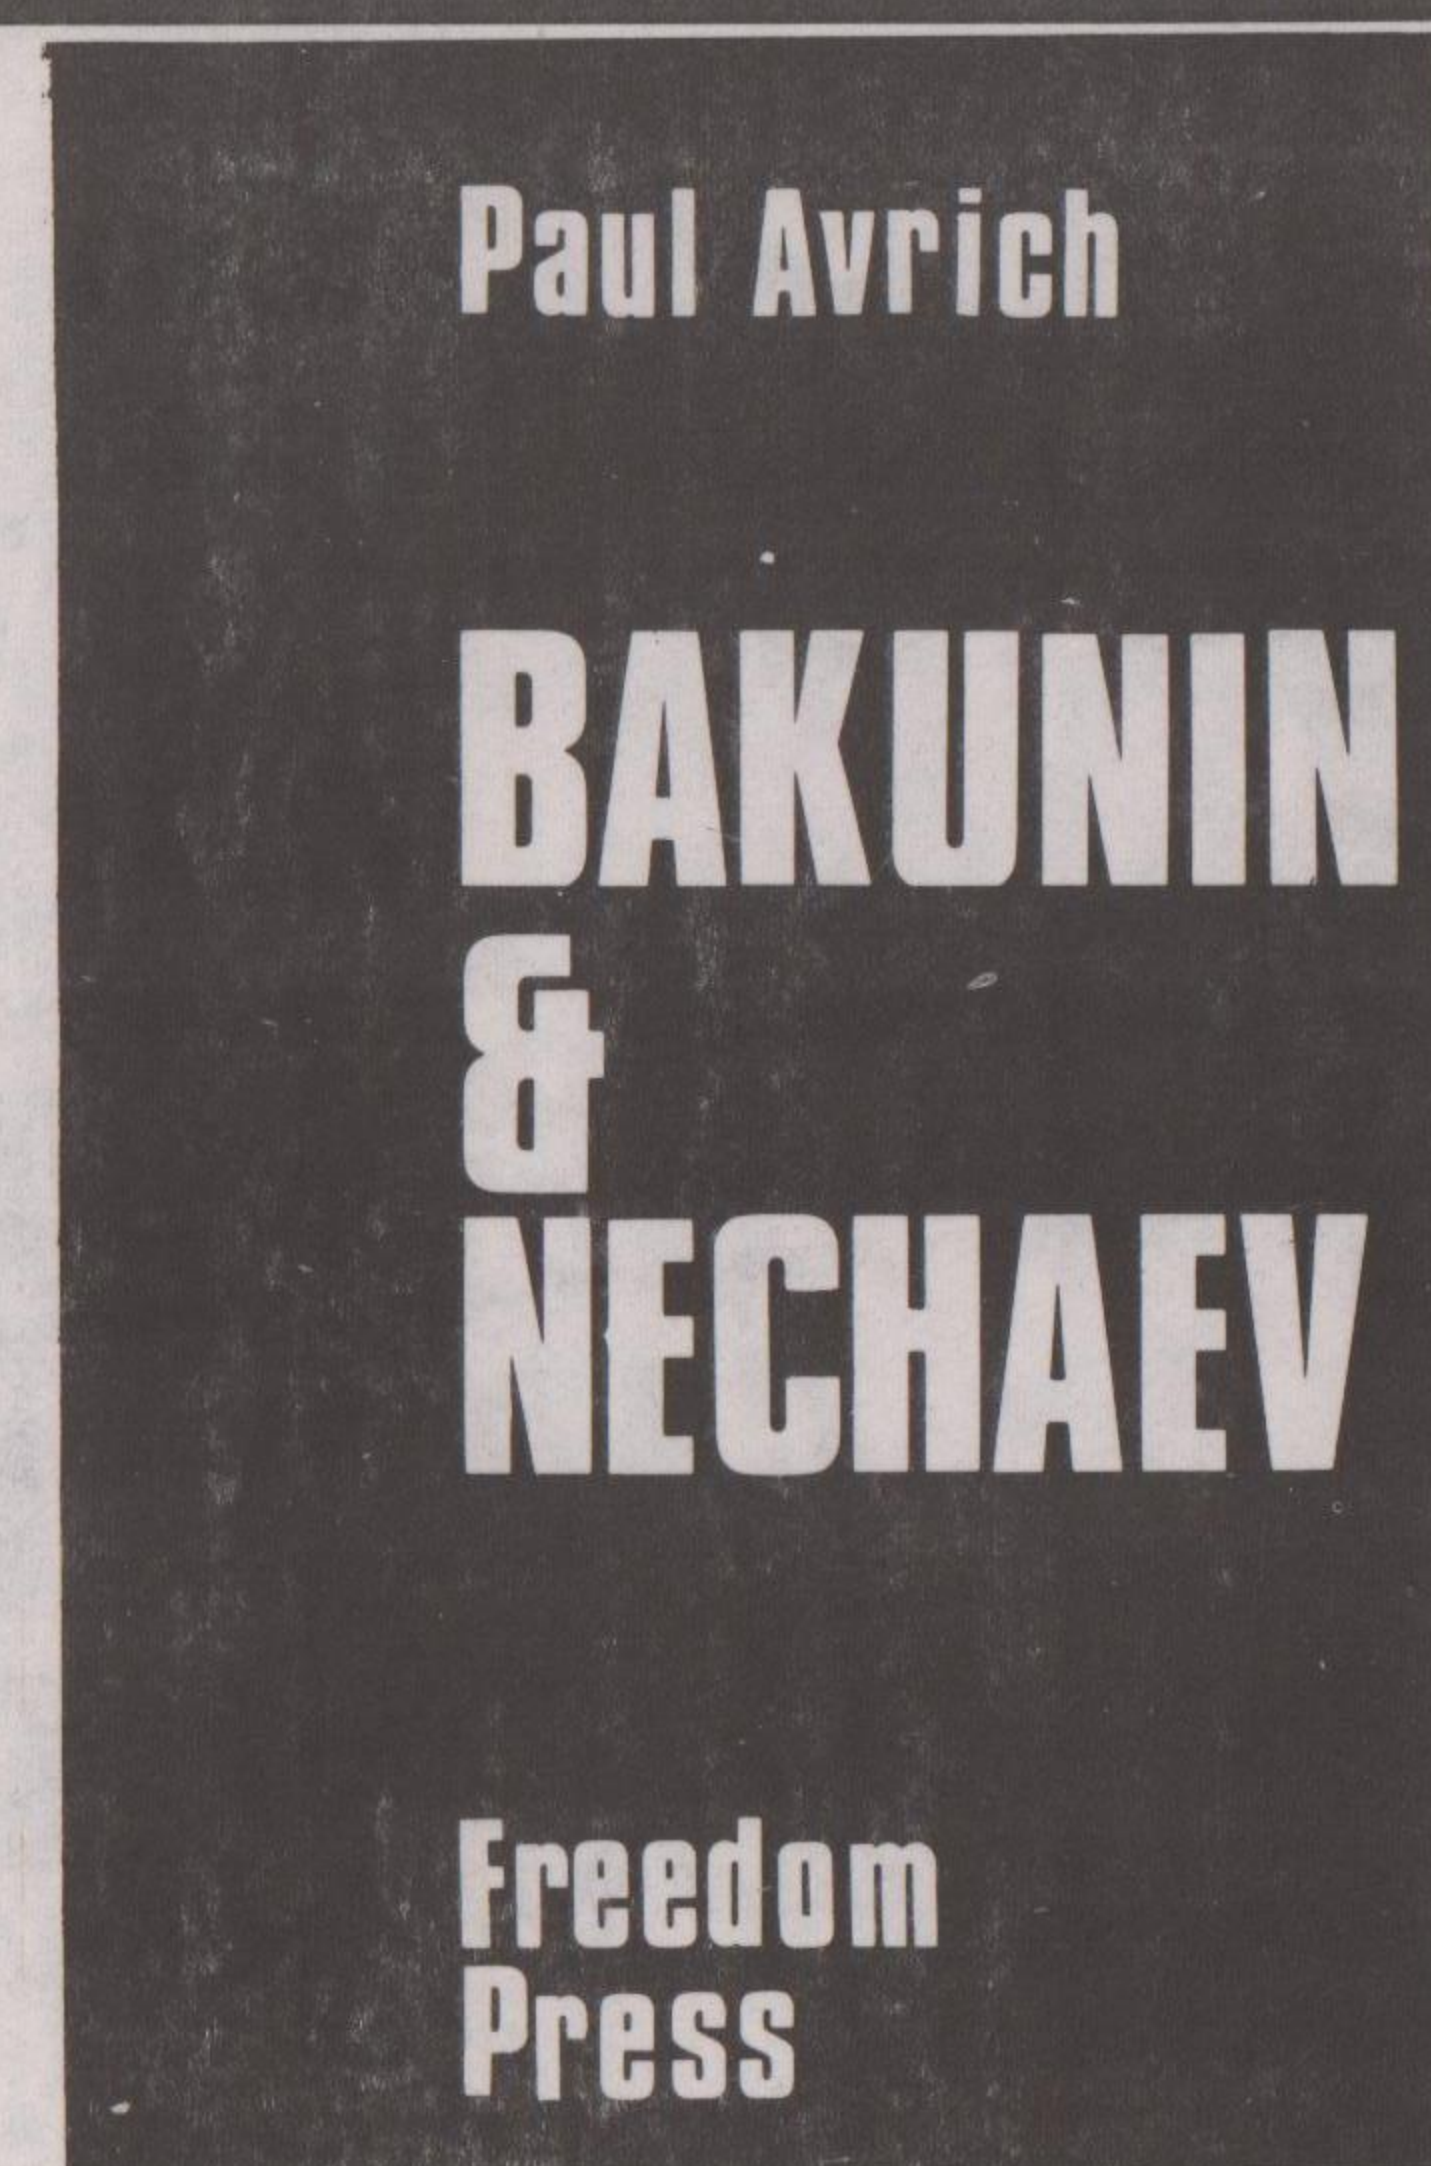

A collection of some thirty articles examining Socialism as practised by the Labour Party and Trade Unions. The author shows how the struggle for power has reduced the radicalism to the minimum, Socialists in name only.

NICOLAS WALTER 32 pages

pamphlet 40 plus 19p post

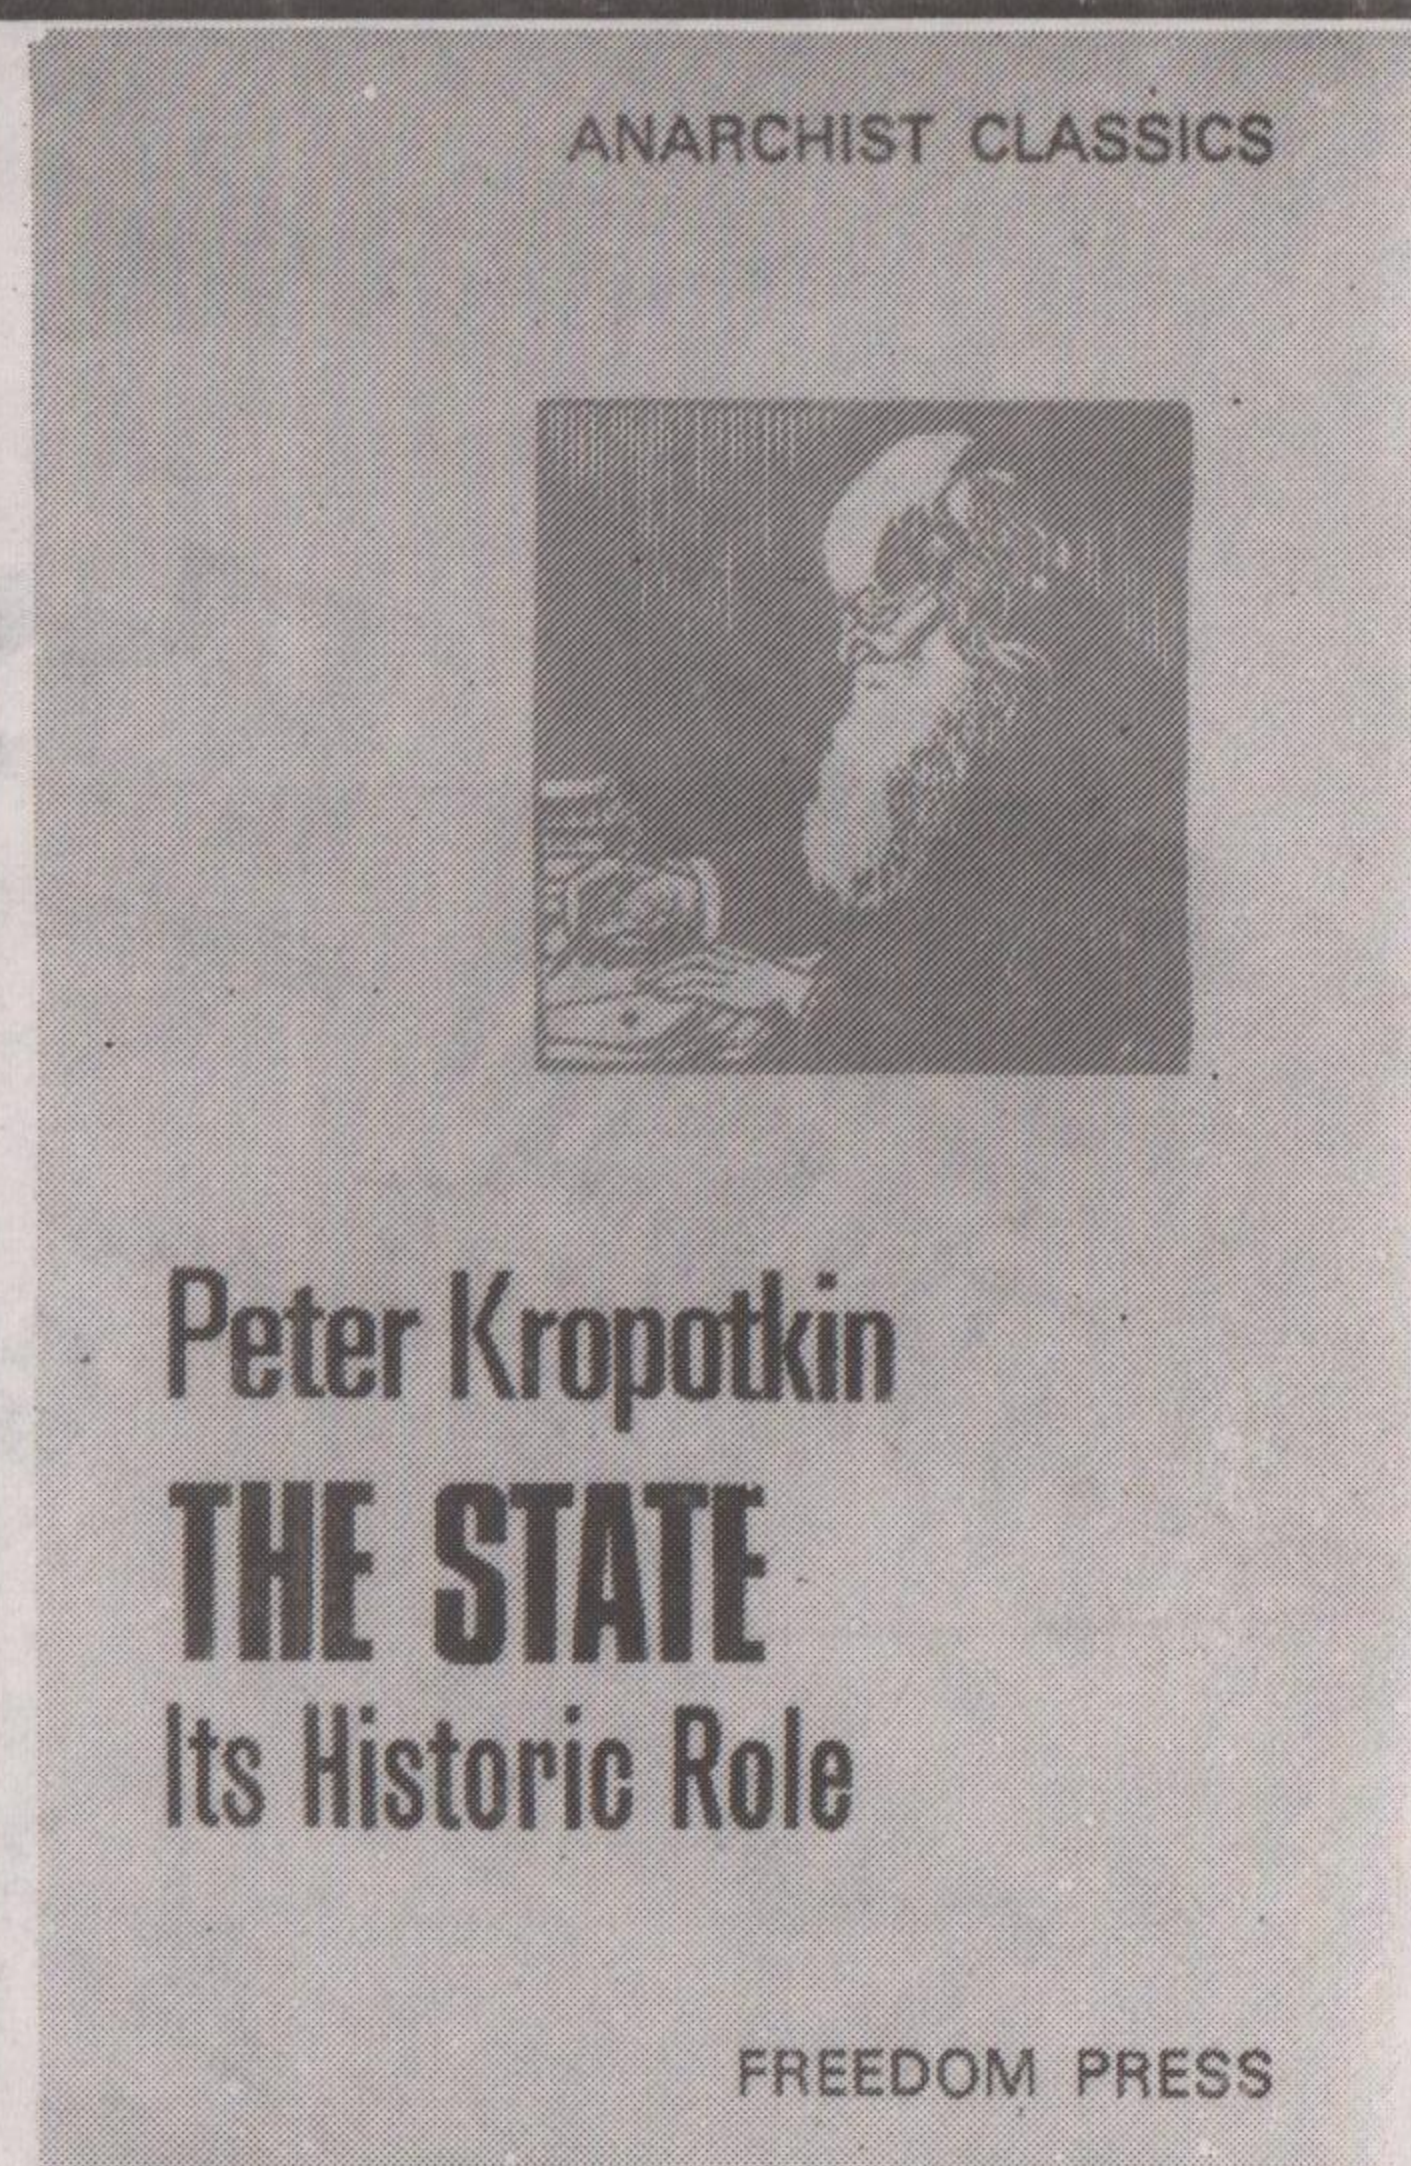

What do anarchists believe? How do anarchists differ? What do anarchists want? What do anarchists do? Probably the best introduction to anarchism available today.

PAUL AVRICH 32 pages

pamphlet 20p plus 25p post

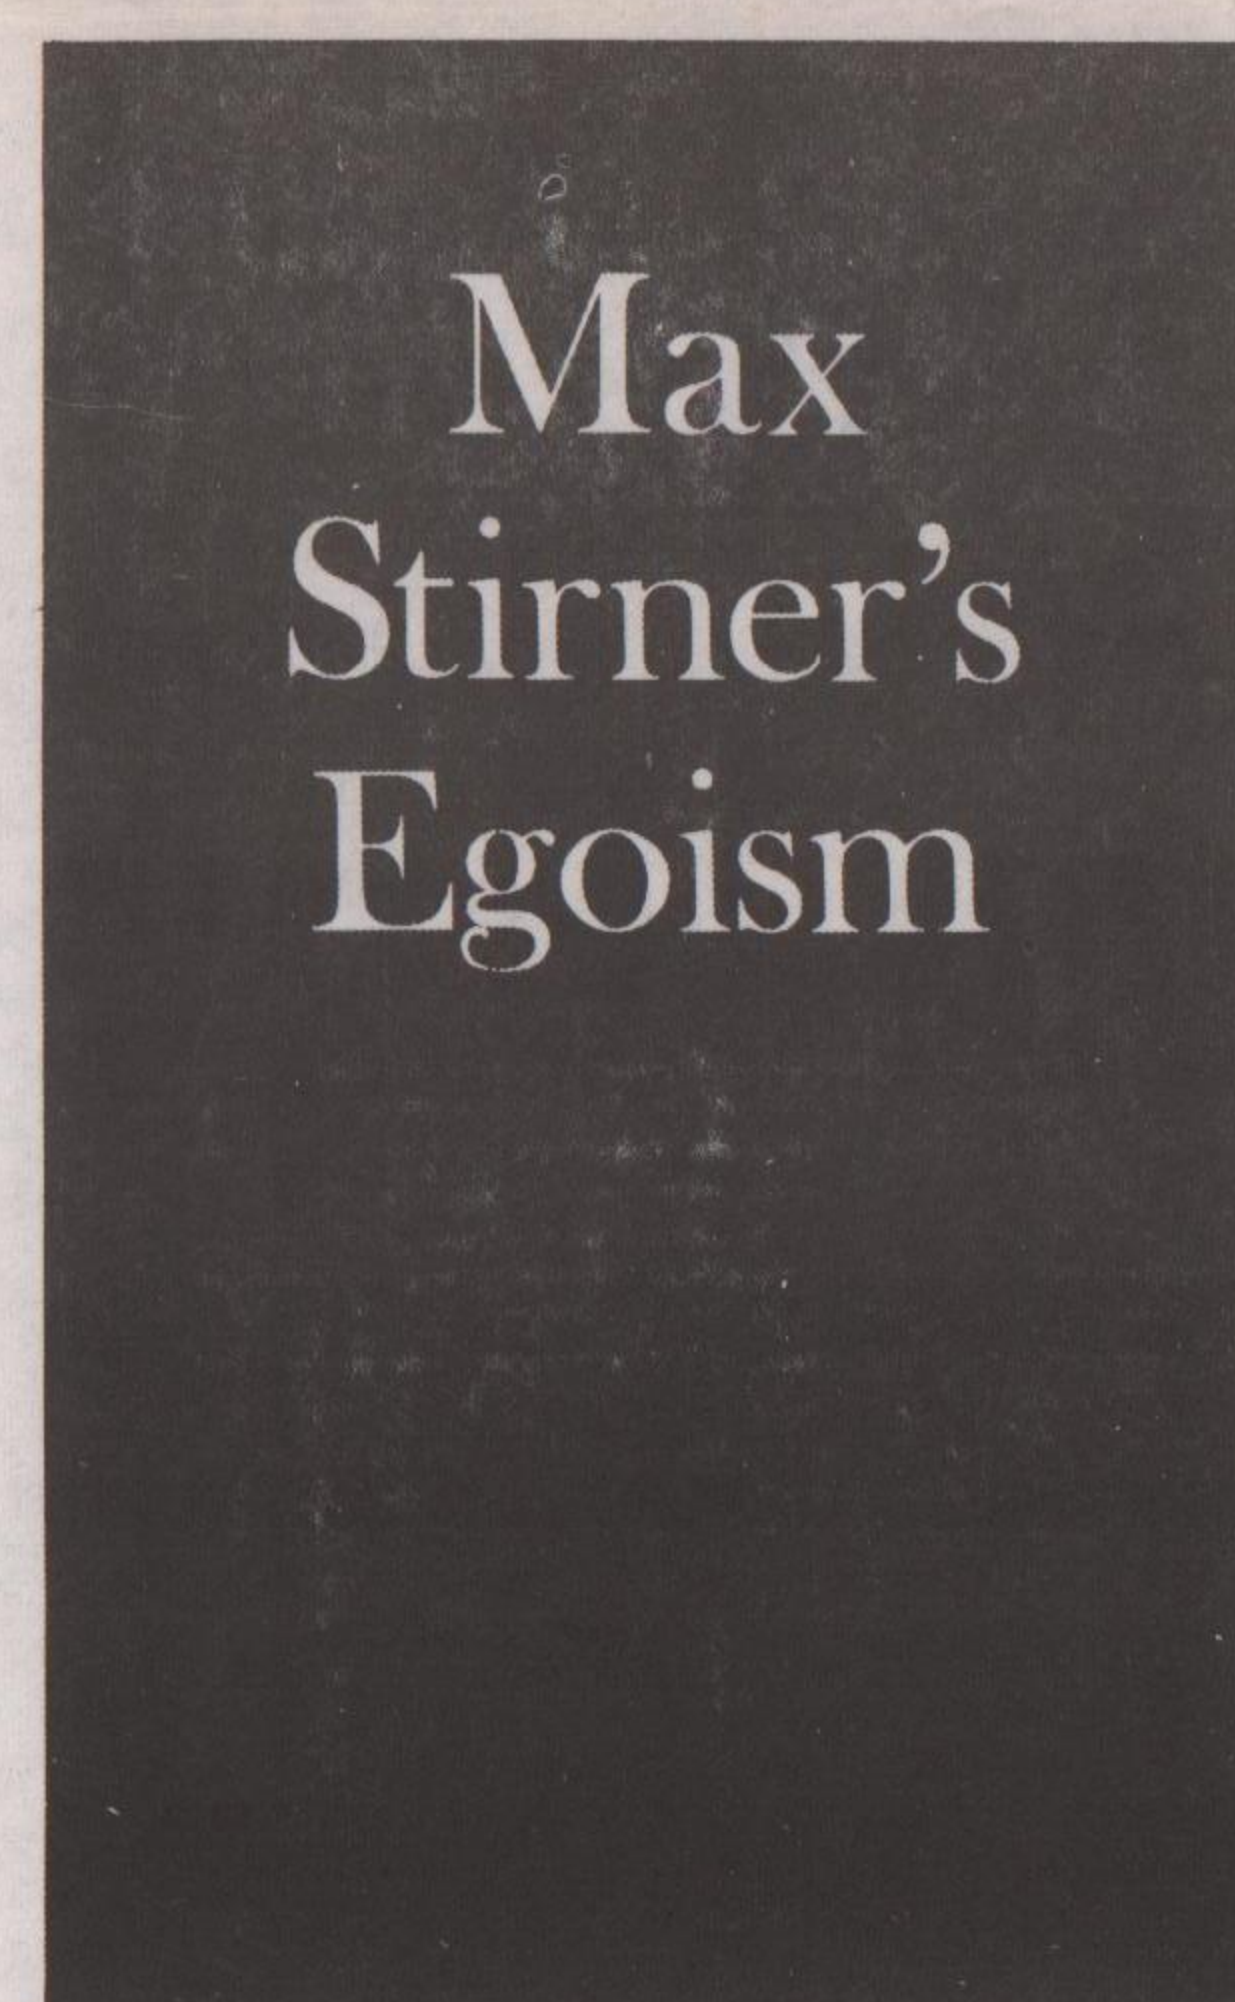

The relationship between Bakunin and Nechaev was one that had a profound effect. Here are the roots of the conflict between libertarian and authoritarian forms of Socialism and organisation for revolution.

PETER KROPOTKIN 56 pages

pamphlet 50p plus 25p post

The classic anarchist critique of the State. Written in 1897 the basic premise holds good today, the State is there for the benefit of the ruling class, not the people.

JOHN P CLARK 112 pages

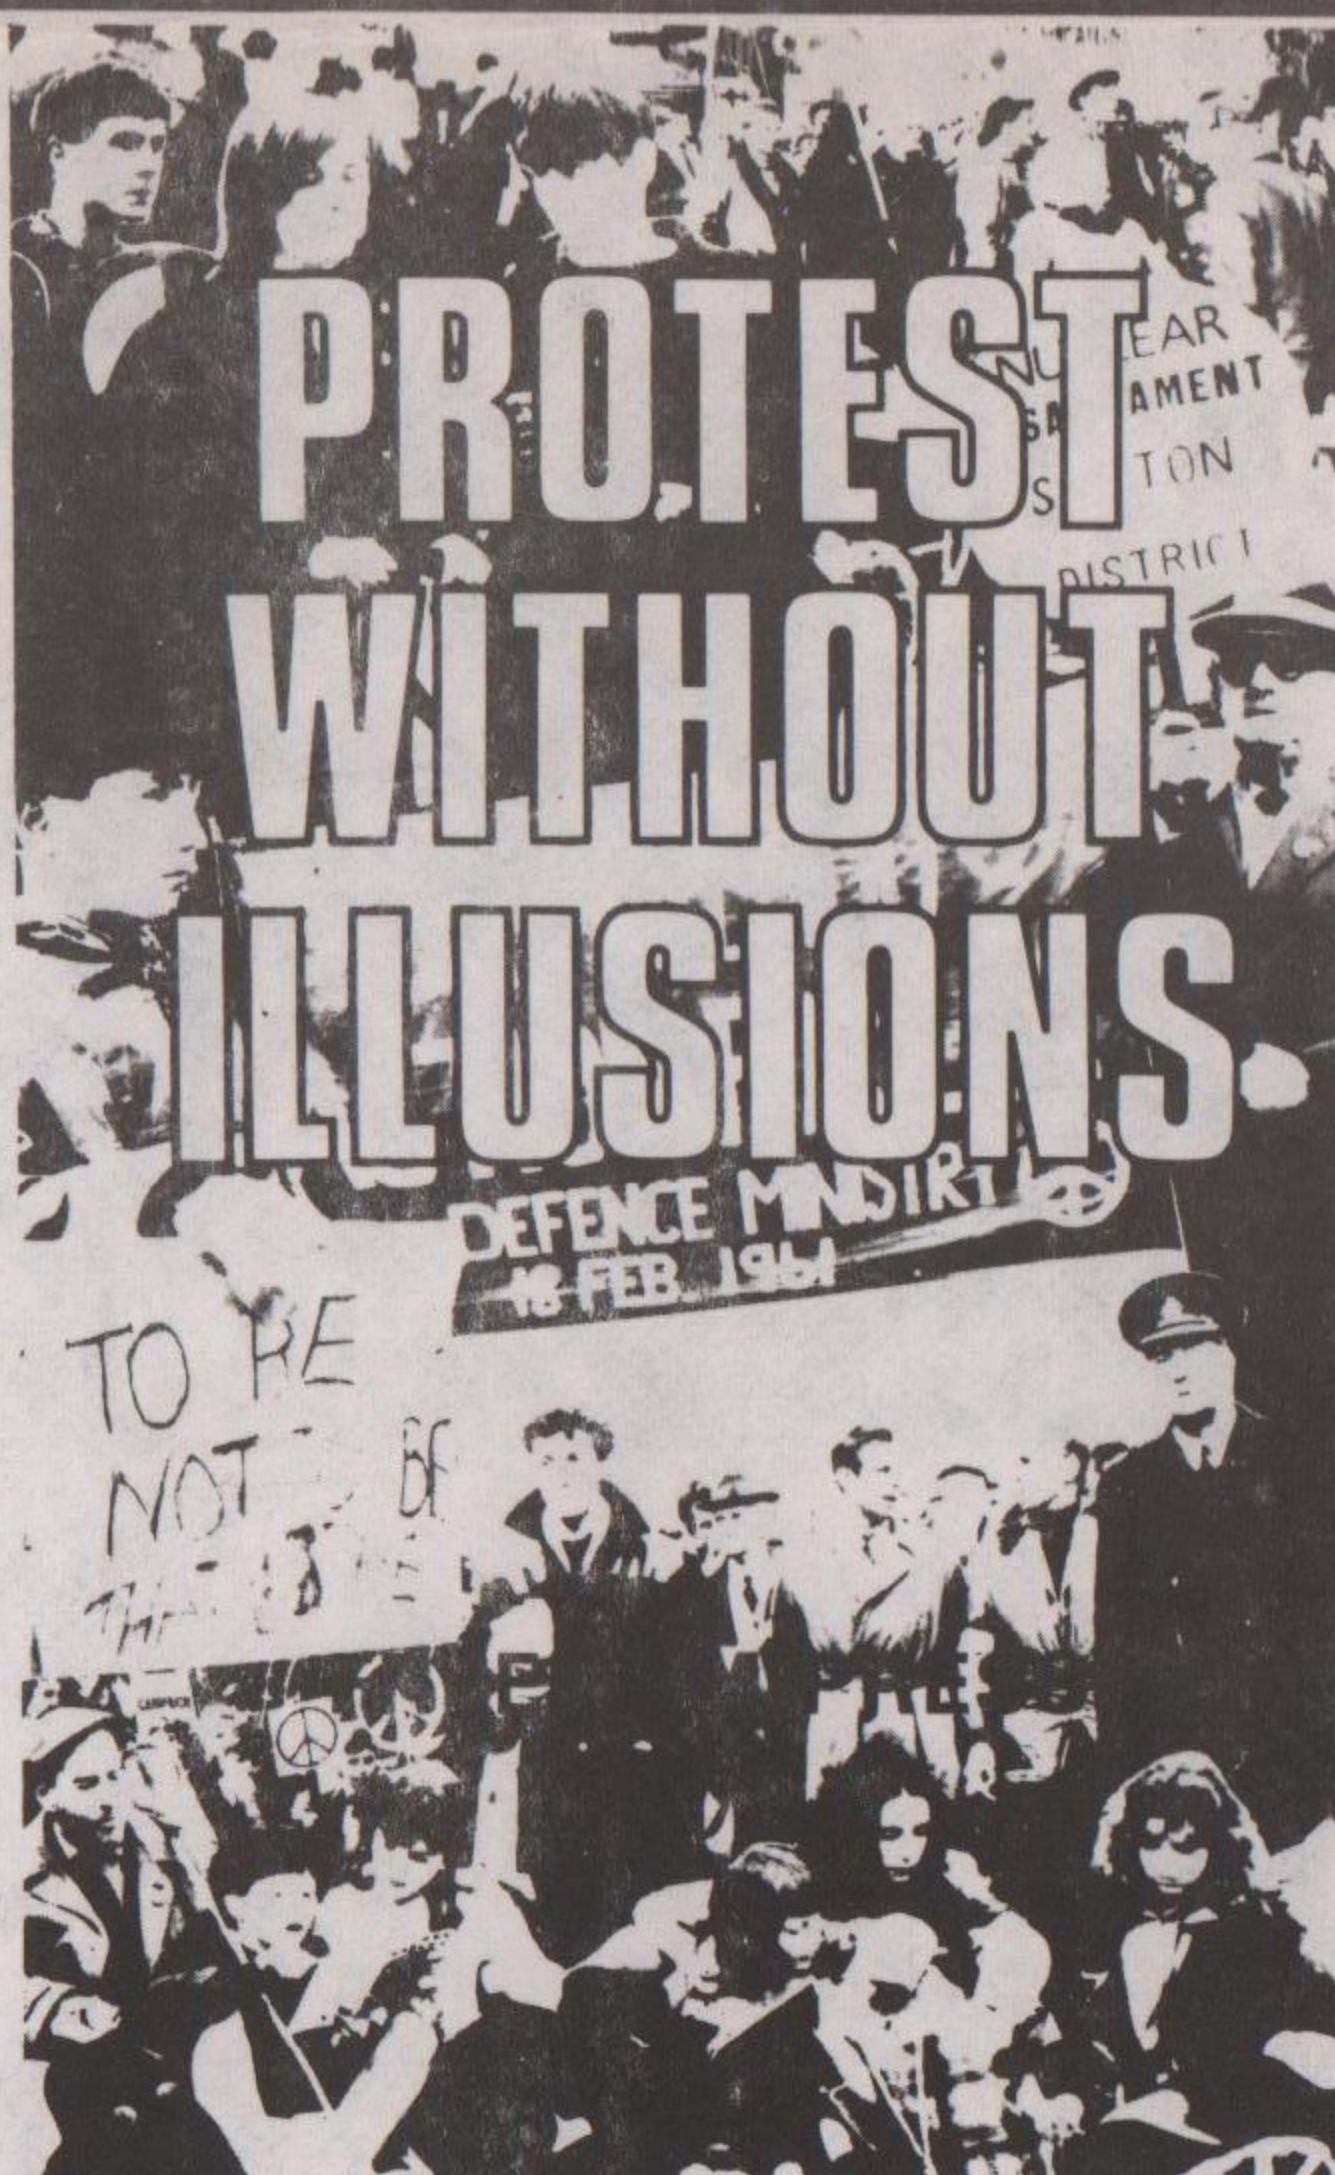

paperback £1.50 plus 36p post

Claimed by both 'Right' and 'Left', the ideas of Stirner and their wider implications are often lost in the heat of that debate. J P Clark's essay redresses that balance with a searching enquiry that goes beyond proprietary claims.

paperback £1.95 plus 49p post

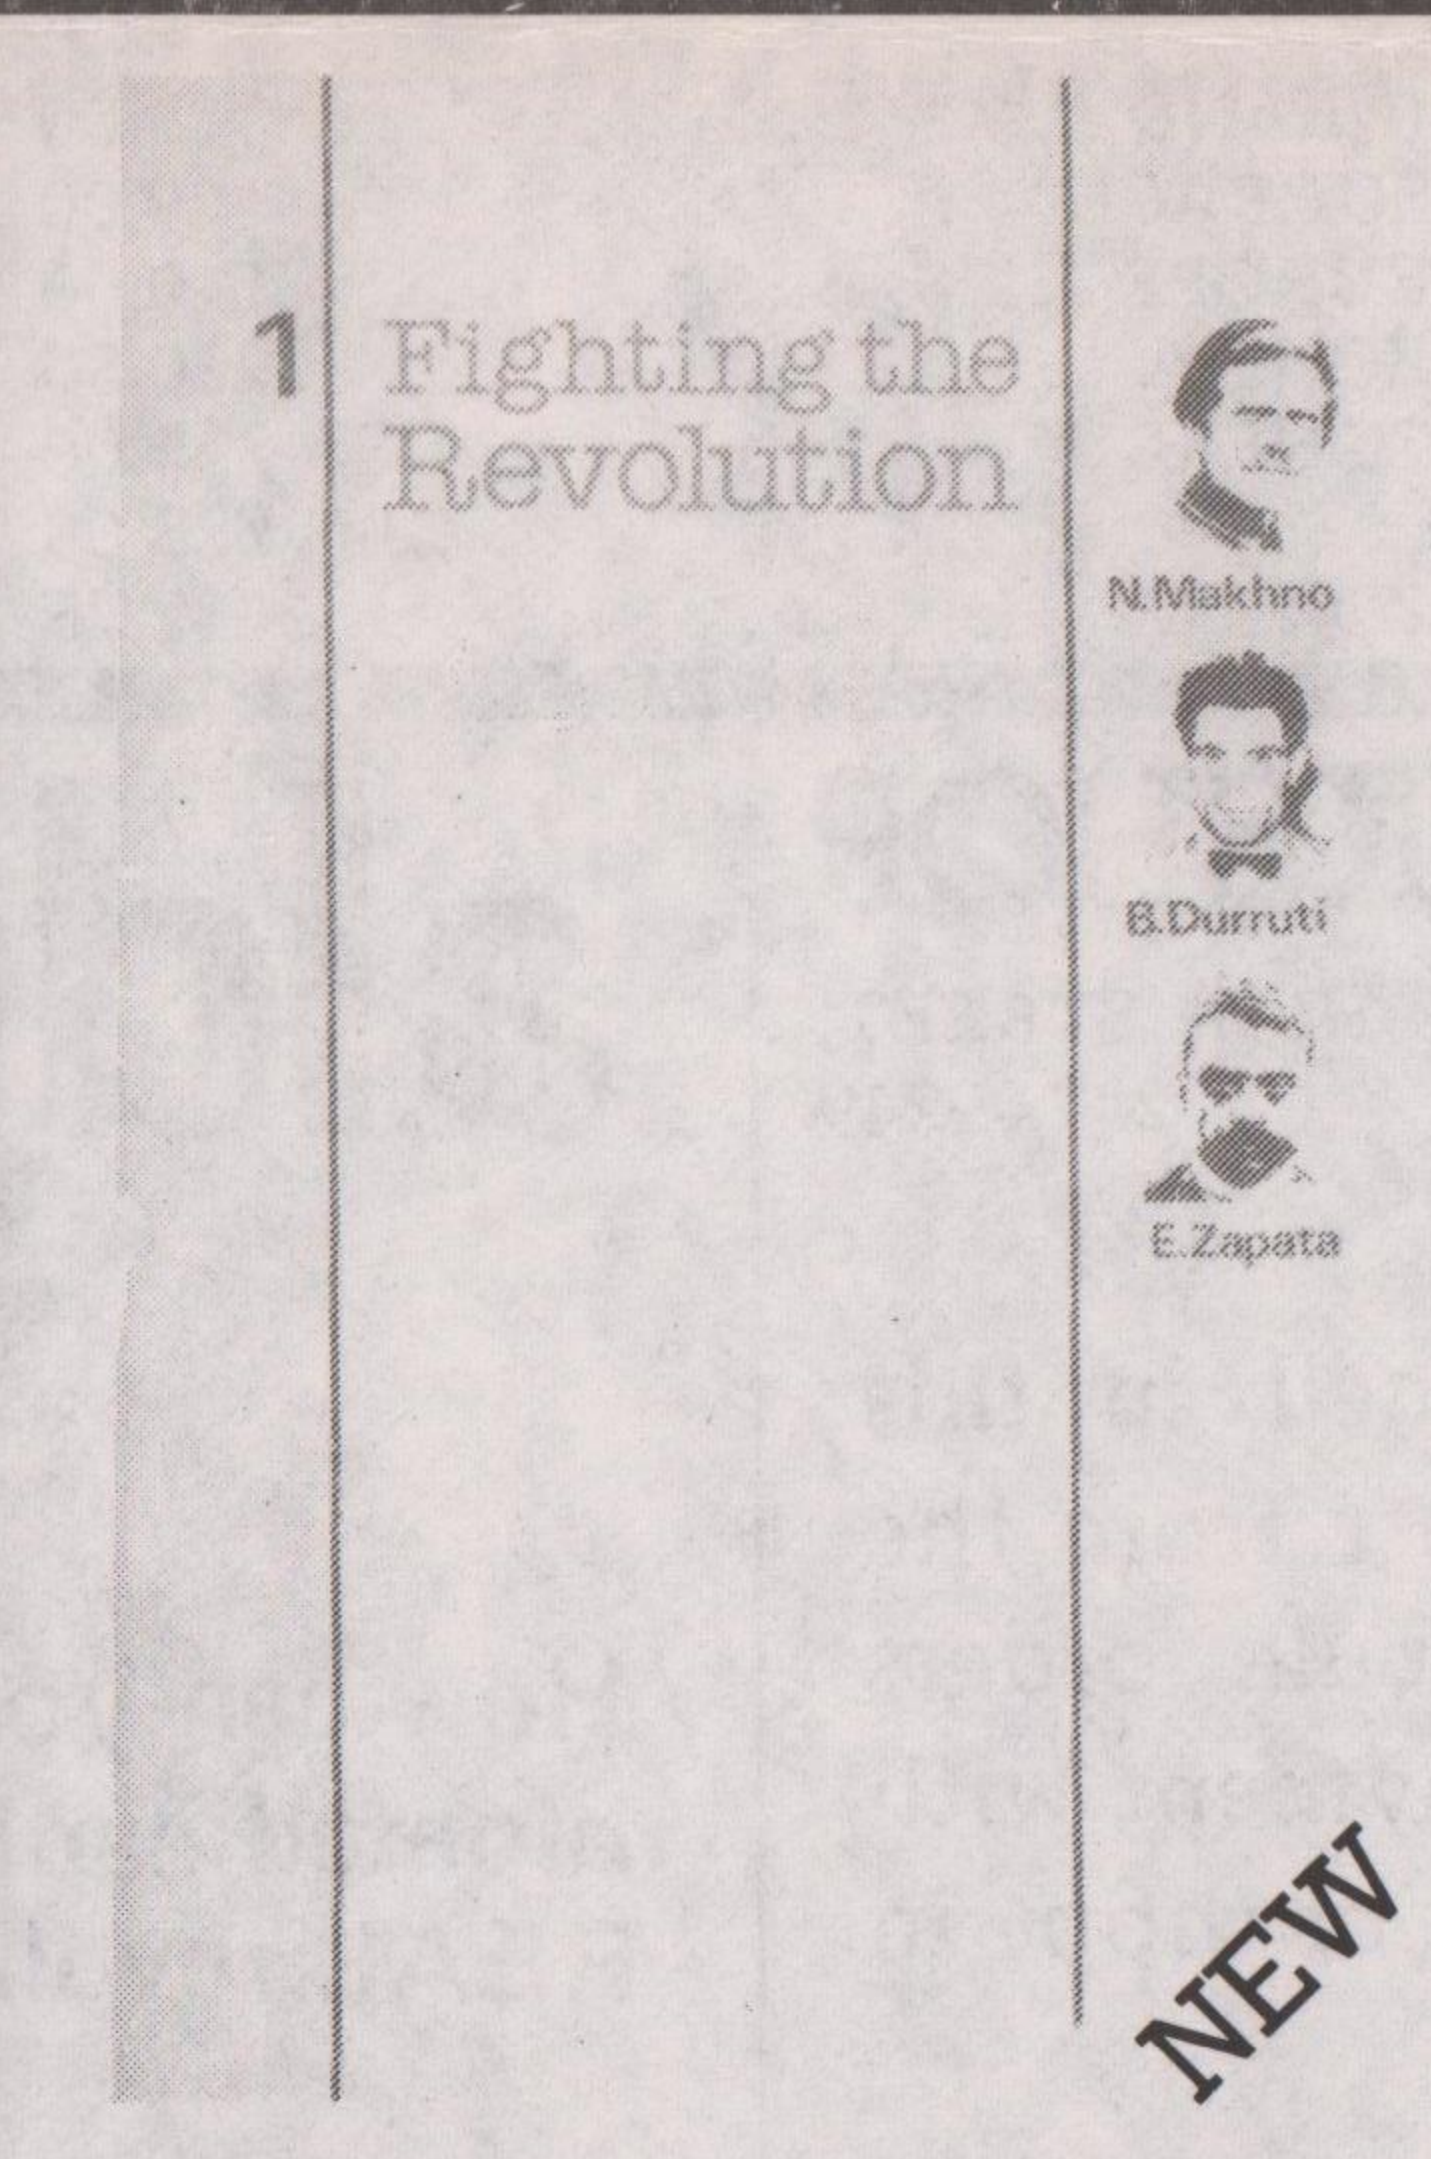

Drawing on his experience as both participant and observer in CND's early beginnings, Richards sounds a timely warning for the new revitalised movement. Protest, yes, but have no illusions about governments or parties taking heed.

ERRICO MALATESTA 54 pages

pamphlet 50p plus 25p post

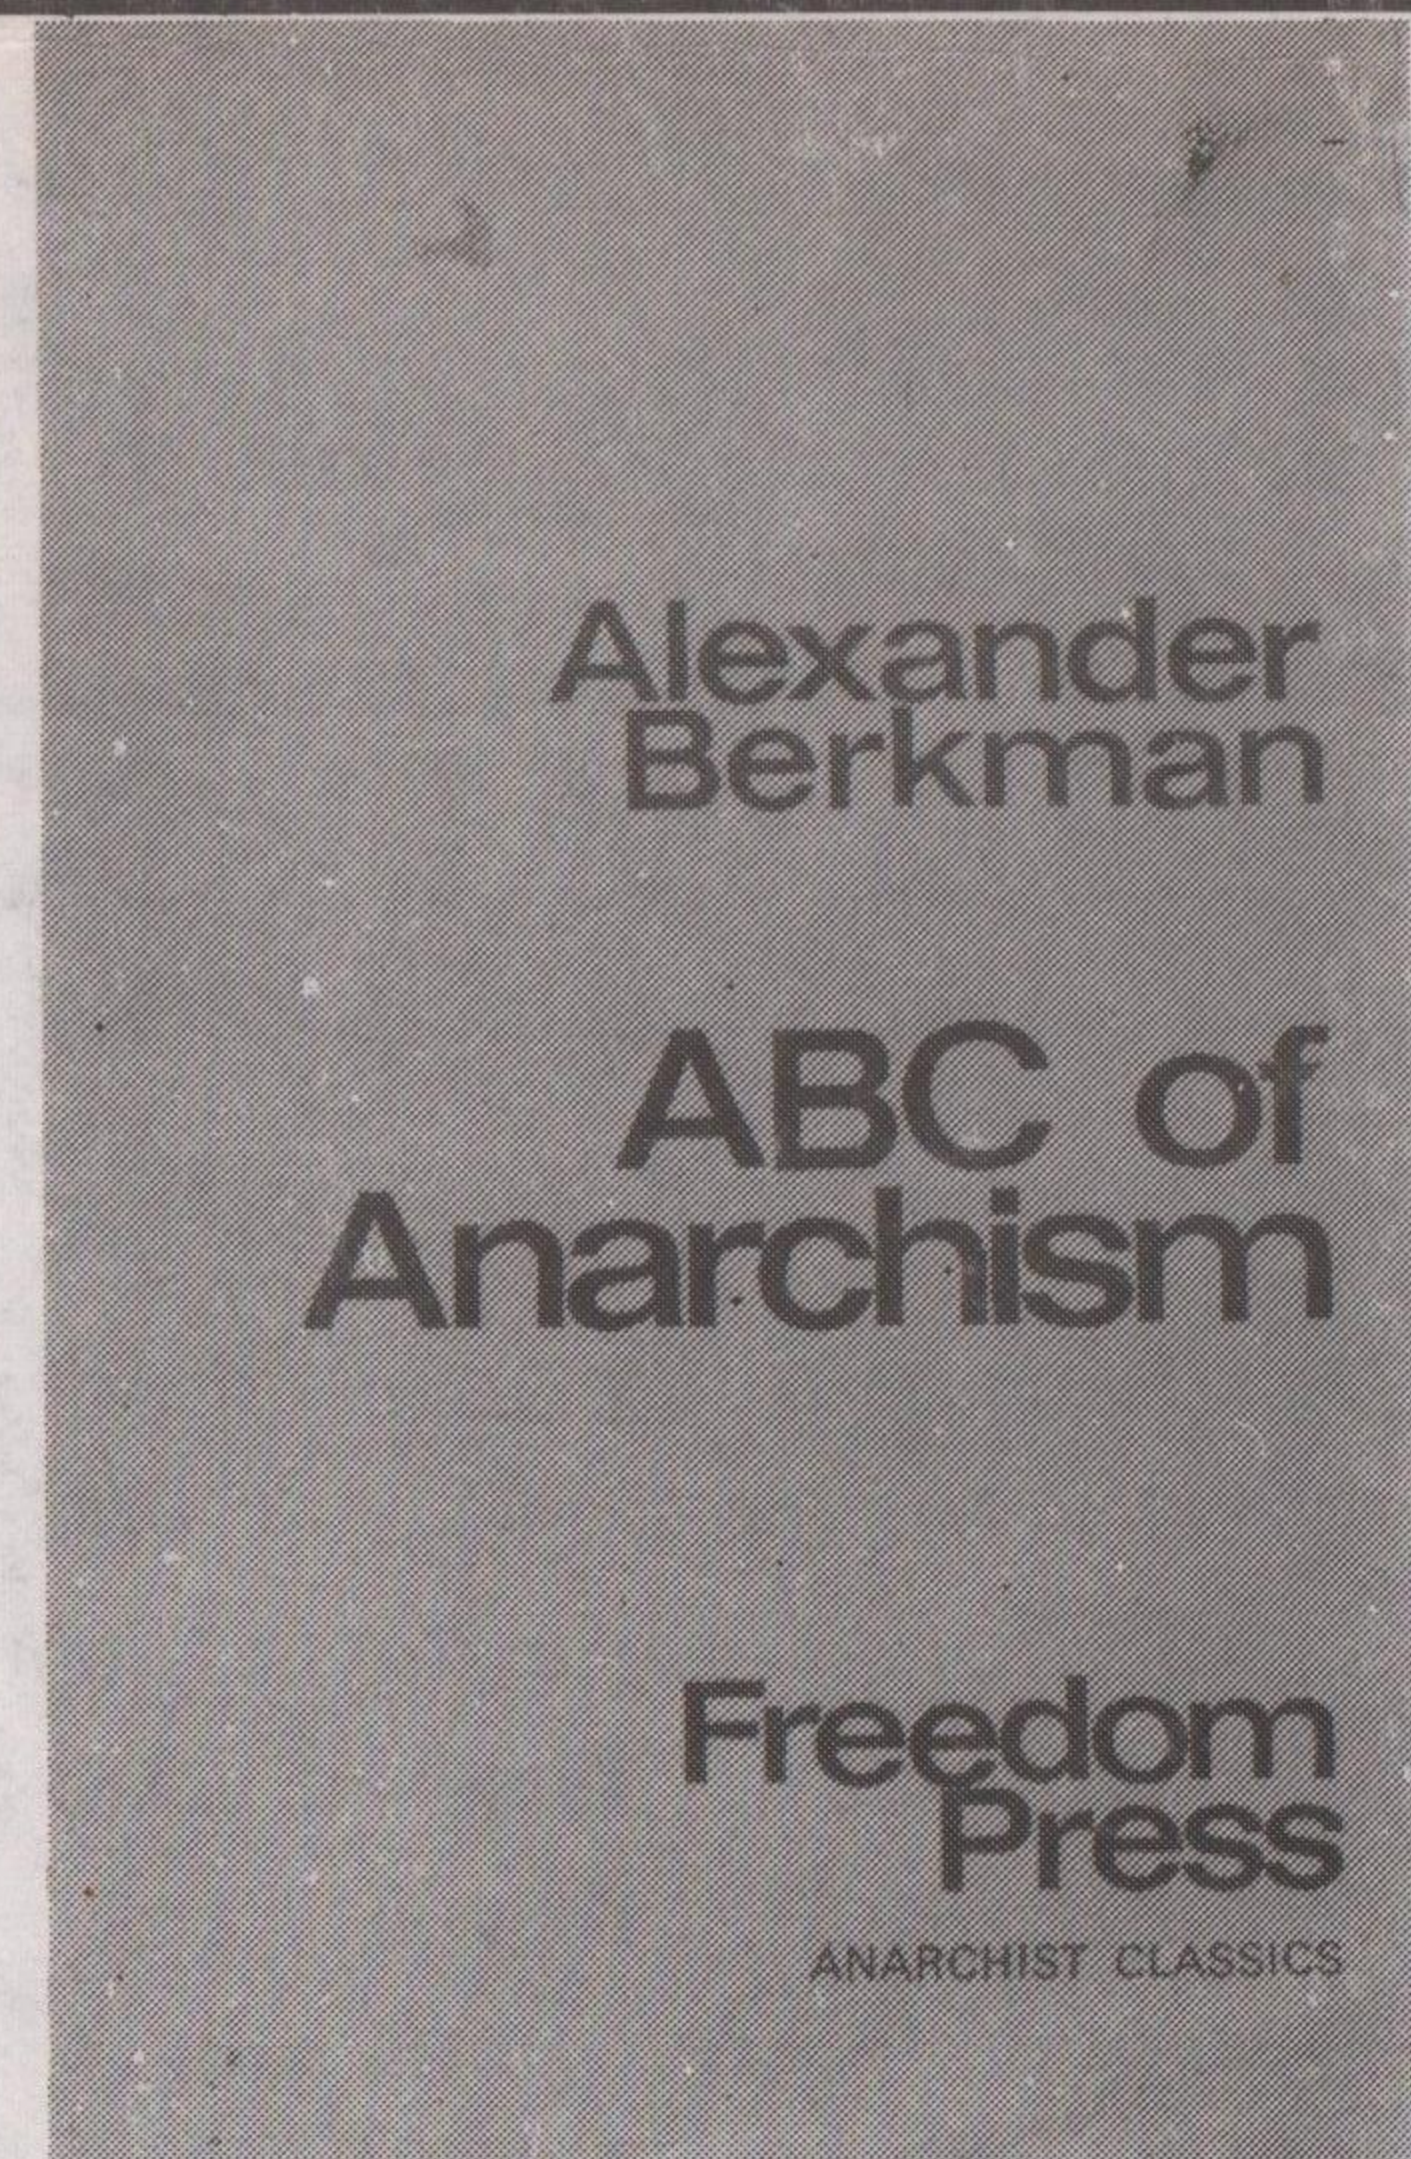

A writer of passion and conviction, here Malatesta expounds his theories on anarchism. This edition contains a new translation from the original Italian.

P NEWELL 44 pages

J STEVENSON
pamphlet 75p plus 25p post

Makhno, Durruti and Zapata, three men who shared a common bond. Not content to live as slaves they each fought, at different times and places, for freedom. First in a new series of FREEDOM pamphlets.

ALEXANDER BERKMAN 86 pages

pamphlet £1.00 plus 36p post

Born in Czarist Russia, Berkman emigrated to America in 1882. An anarchist from his early teens he was soon active there. This pamphlet puts forward his views on anarchist communism.
