A residents perspective

By David Roberts
Resident

I first became aware of New Deal for Communities (NDC) about 18 months ago when the Government announced that the newly formed Social Exclusion Unit was in the process of identifying small neighbourhoods with 'joined up' problems for a new sort of regeneration project focusing on people rather than just 'bricks and mortar'. By November 1998 the Government announced that Nottingham was to have a NDC area and officers from the Greater Nottingham Partnership and the City Council had decided that parts of Radford and Hyson Green would benefit from up to £50 million of New Deal funding over a 10 year period.

Since November, myself, other Forum members and members of other residents groups in the area have been to endless meetings, a visioning weekend, conferences, and more. It's been a long process so far and I feel that the hard work has only just begun with the acceptance of the 'expression of interest' by the Government, the first meeting of the Interim Partnership (good luck!) and the start of the consultation process to write an Action Plan.

I think that if you asked anyone involved in a community led 'bottom up' regeneration project they would tell you that it is quite difficult - to say the least - especially in an inner city, multi-cultural area like ours. The Partnership Council has been trying for the last 2 years to allocate URBAN funding against an Action Plan which was community determined - so we do have some experience of the effort involved to produce a delivery plan which local people will take ownership of. The real work of informing the whole community of what NDC is and what it can do has started with 'The Big Mix' on the Forest... but it's going to be a real challenge to begin to break down the barriers of mistrust and cynicism which have built up over the years between local people and service providers. We need to start empowering and encouraging the public sector to work with residents and business people to come up with radical solutions to the problems of our neighborhood.

Closer to home we also need to sensibly build on what the Partnership Council working groups have started. It's no secret that one of the reasons that our area was chosen for NDC treatment was to build on what the Partnership Council has started in terms of partnership working.

At the moment 7 themed groups are being set up to look at issues such as housing or health and I urge local people to get involved - find out more - it's your chance to influence the way services are delivered and managed locally - and have some say in the delivery plan for a £35-£50 million regeneration scheme. Our area has seen so many 'top down' government schemes with imposed agendas to little affect - this time it seems different - the local community are being encouraged to work in partnership and, in theory, no one sector can impose its agenda. At least the government are being flexible and are willing to support new ideas and we have got 10 years but the only way NDC can truly work if all our community have a chance to participate in and take ownership of this exciting project.

New Deal for Communities

General information for Partnership Council Resident Forum members

£35-£50 Million quid for parts of Radford & Hyson Green

Background

This New Deal Special has been put together for Resident Forum members as part of our work to disseminate information. If you are a resident in or near the New Deal area then there are real opportunities to get involved.

If local people are not involved in drawing together a New Deal plan then it will not work.

New Deal for Communities is a major new regeneration programme which has been launched by the Government.

It is offering between £35 and £50 Million to be spent in parts of Radford and Hyson Green which are experiencing some of the worst problems within our wider community.

The consultation work to draw together a programme of how New Deal will work, called Phase 2, is being lead by a New Deal Interim Partnership. This group includes some representatives from the Partnership Council Forums.

The Partnership Council, as an organisation, has been asked to help with some parts of Phase 2. Mainly publicity for consultation events and recruiting people to attend consultation events. The Partnership Council is however not in charge of New Deal for Communities and is not responsible for how the consultation work is done.

The process of consultation for New Deal for Communities to form the agenda for action is currently underway. The time table is tight and although it is not too late to get involved there is no time to waste.

You may have already read or heard stuff about New Deal but developing a plan to spend 35-50 million pounds is complex and many people don't understand what is going on or how they fit in. The Partnership Council Residents Forums thought that it would be a good idea to get together and find out what is going on. Once you know then you can at least have an informed choice about whether you want to take part. If you are interested in finding out about New Deal for Communities then come to the joint Resident Forum meeting. If you don't live in the area of benefit you may still find it interesting as they are going to be knock on benefits for the whole area. The evening will also give you a chance to meet other Forum members and along with the New Deal bit there will be some refreshments and time for a good chin wag.

The entrance to the Unity Primary School is on the corner of Forest Road West and Ayr Street. About two minutes walk from Alfreton Road.

✓ The Consultation Plan.

Without good consultation within the community the quality of the process for drawing up a New Deal for Communities programme will be compromised.

Wider Consultation

The process we are following is a widening out of consultation toward an open congress at the end of November.

Wider consultation is being split into seven key themes which cover a cross section of issues which affect our community. Consultation work will be done on each of these themes and the information and ideas brought to the first congress.

Focusing ideas.

After this action ideas would be focused toward a second congress in February 2000. The result of this process will be a programme which will be presented to the Government. If Actions are not in the programme they will not get funding.

The overall process.

New Deal for Communities is a new programme that will provide funding for the intensive regeneration of part of our local Neighbourhood.

The programme will support regeneration that tackles issues like high unemployment, crime, educational underachievement and poor health. It will support partnerships that bring together local people, community and voluntary organisations, public agencies, local authorities and businesses.

New Deal for Communities is offering to be more flexible and local than any other previous regeneration scheme, and if a successful plan is put together it will be supported with significant sums of public money from the Government.

The Government intends New Deal for Communities to progress in three distinct stages. These are shown in the diagram below.

Phase One is where local people, groups and bodies were invited to form a partnership which selected an area for New Deal and prepare a proposal demonstrating their capacity to take New Deal on.

Phase Two, is where selected partnerships would receive funding to support them as they produce a detailed plan. The plan would set out the strategy and delivery plan for New Deal for Communities. This is the Phase which is currently underway. To put together an Action Plan local people need to be involved.

Phase Three is where successful plans would receive funding to begin delivering their New Deal for Communities plan.

While the Action Plan at the end of Phase Two will show how New Deal will be done there will still be ongoing consultation and development of ideas throughout the ten years of the programme.

If you do not take part the plan will be shaped by those who do.

The area was chosen within Nottingham as being an area which experienced some of the highest deprivation. There was also a restriction set by the Government in that the area had to cover up to 4000 households at the most.

On the positive side the area also had to be able to prove that local people had the capacity to be involved in such a new and innovative regeneration scheme. All the different residents and voluntary groups and the work and experience of the Partnership Council proved to score points in our favour.

Although the area is quite tightly defined it has been recognised that improvement must fit in context of the wider community. Hopefully it will not just be this area that benefits from the improvements.
