

Chat with Michael.

Michael Briscoe, Outreach Worker at the Partnership Council is moving on. Here are some of his thoughts about his time at the partnership...

Interview by Paul Sanguinazzi.

Q: What have you learned through your involvement with the PC

It's difficult to explain, in a sense I was unsure what I did and didn't know when I first arrived. Now that I have had some time I am much clearer on what I've managed to gain from working here. The biggest thing is the range of different kinds of people. There are so many differences, not just racial groups or voluntary groups but just as individuals. It's not something I'd thought about. What I've found is that they all share things in common - they all believe that what they are doing is the right thing and that, perhaps, it's just the day to day running of things that causes problems.

I'm aware that a lot of groups are stretched, resources wise. They haven't got the money, the staff or the resources to run the organisation as effectively as they would like. Because of this they can wander around searching for that elusive funding and because of this a lot of time is spent on dealing with barriers that they feel are there. It's a challenge because I also know that there are voluntary sector, business sector and public sector that have money and resources but are similarly complaining that not enough people are asking for the money. It's a very frustrating situation.

In the end people have to engage in making change happen. In my job of doing outreach I meet people and I hear their needs but it's impossible for me to advocate for each and every group.

Q: What do you feel about partnership working?

The good things about partnerships are the merging and coming together of different organisations and people with different thoughts. When they get over the barriers of personality (and the personal) and deal with the wider issues and try and alleviate some of the problems going on in the area.

The real problem is that people won't work together, I think a lot of this is because of personalities. That stops partnerships growing.

Q: What have you personally gained?

It's been a very traumatic year for myself - with a new child who experienced some serious health issues. When I came to the Partnership Council I came with my own experiences of working and I assumed that everyone would be the same... and they are not. You have to take each person as they come and that's something I have learned. For me trusting others was not a very easy thing to do nor allowing myself to be myself within a group. At first it was difficult but through time and through the team I've changed. Sometimes it doesn't even seem like work. You have jobs where you come in straight to the grindstone but here it's not like that. It's more like - I have another week to make a change - to perhaps find another group and to offer that group the opportunity to be involved. Whether they do or do not take part is their choice but at least they have the opportunity.

I've also gained in other ways. I'm a totally different person to the one I was last Christmas when I first came. I was very insular and I was a little bit over confident, but now I've built a real confidence within myself. Part of my role is to go out and talk to people I don't know and put myself on the line. I have to take the criticisms and run with the good and the bad. It's also opened other doors professionally and personally.

It's also a case of finding out things I didn't know about myself. Some things have come out of the training we did but also going to conferences, doing presentations, attending meetings and writing up notes and such. So I've gained more confidence in myself and in doing things.

Q: What have been the good and bad experiences of working here.

Starting with problems it's mainly when groups have levelled criticisms which are often unfounded or based on hearsay rather than facts. That's very frustrating. I'm aware of rumours flying around but no one ever comes up to you and says anything directly. It's always through other sources and gossip that information often seems to transmit and feed back.

I know the Partnership Council does not get everything right but if people had something to say it would be much better if they came to the source of their concern and say 'were not happy because of this... but we'll sit down, go over it and try and resolve it with you'. Unfortunately that does not happen too often.

The Partnership Council is an organisation which is open to change. If some things not working you can sit down and sort out how to make it better. Some organisations I have worked for before have not been willing to address their shortcomings.

Q: Why are you moving on?

I was asked earlier in the year to look at taking a personal focus on one particular area. I took on a mental health project round the corner. It's one of those groups with limited resources and who try to cram in everything in a very short amount of time.

Doing this made me think a lot. I felt that I wanted to be more directly involved in making direct changes. I can do that to a degree in my outreach role at the Partnership Council but I have some close friends who have suffered from schizophrenia and other mental health issues and I wanted to do more direct work in this field. I've always been interested in support and counselling for mental health but wasn't sure how to progress with that. Then the group I was working with approached me and asked if it was interested in working for them.

Q: Has the Partnership Council helped in your career progression?

I believe that if I hadn't been in post at the Partnership Council there is no way I would have got to where I am going so quickly.

For me it wasn't an easy decision to make because I enjoy my work at the Partnership Council, I really do. It's been such a long time since I actually enjoyed getting up in the mornings for a job, and even though I might plan a day there's no guarantee that it will go the way its supposed to.

There is always something new happening... and that's good. The word's getting out that the Partnership Council leads to different things and that makes this job something worthwhile. I will be sad to go.

Sincerest best wishes from everyone at the Partnership Council for Michael. Our thanks for his energy and commitment to the staff team and the very best for Michael, and his family, in the future.

Celebrating Achievement

Thursday February 1st
at the Council House, Nottingham
Open displays 1.00pm - 5.00pm

Plus evening events.

The Partnership Council has been responsible for the development and stewardship of Nottingham's £5 million European URBAN Initiative.

This stewardship and many of the subsequent projects within URBAN have been groundbreaking in their achievements.

Much of the work has been recommended as an example of 'best practice' for the UK and Nottingham's URBAN programme is widely recognised as being amongst the most successful programme of its type in Europe.

Celebrating Achievement is an event which will offer an opportunity for local people to celebrate and see what their local URBAN has achieved. Along with this local audience we are inviting all of the UK's URBAN 2 Initiatives to visit and see what we've been up to in Nottingham.

Additionally, in the evening, we are staging a small awards event to recognise and thank all the individuals, organisations and sectors which have made the success of Nottingham's URBAN possible. To round it off we will be holding a special social.

Celebrating Achievement

Many of the projects funded through the European URBAN Initiative are unique, innovative and examples of excellence in their field. As such we want to bring them together to show the breadth of work that URBAN has supported.

Are you part of an URBAN project?!

We are writing to all URBAN projects however if you are one of the projects we are asking you to...

1. Exhibit a display about your project, what it does, how it works and what it has achieved.
2. Staff the display with at least one person during the afternoon so that visitors and guests can talk to someone about the project.
3. Have some literature available which gives information related specifically to your URBAN project.
4. Ensure key members of the project book the event into their diaries.
5. Put forward names of anyone who they think should be invited to attend on the day.

Simple Awards

We are going to hold a simple awards ceremony in the evening to say a special thank you to those who have really done their bit for this programme. Because of the number of local URBAN projects, plus guests, and the limits of the venue we may be forced to restrict the number of invitations for people who can attend from each project. More details will be available nearer the date.

A special Social

Space for the social will not be as restricted as the award event. However the venue requires us to ensure that entry is by invite, these will be available nearer the date.

If you have any questions please contact Joe Robinson, Chrissie Wells or Adrian Dewhurst at the Partnership Council on 970 8200.

Key fund

New Deal for Communities Fast Track means final countdown to Key Fund.

The Key Fund has been publicised in Onesheet for some time now, however for those who have not yet heard about the fund - a brief overview. The Key Fund is a new funding opportunity available to voluntary organisations, community groups and to social companies operating within the URBAN area. Groups can apply for up to £25,000 for projects, and can be awarded up to 100% of project costs.

The Fund will be used to create job opportunities, to develop the capacity of local people, and to enable local people to access training and employment. Over the last couple of months a number of groups have been in contact with Tim James and myself to obtain more information and request application packs. The launch of the fund has unfortunately been subject to delays.

The technicalities of securing match funding has proved to be a long and difficult affair. However, there is now light at the end of the tunnel. New Deal for Communities has agreed match funding and we are anticipating the final technical details to be sorted out in the very near future. In anticipation we are planning a launch for the key Fund combined with a workshop for potential applicants. The launch will be on Thursday 14th December at 2.00pm at the Vine Centre on Bobbersmill Road. If you would like to attend the launch and/or workshop please contact either Jim or myself on telephone number - 915 6245.

We will then send out details as soon as we have news. All of the people that have previously contacted Sarah (at the Partnership Council) Jim or myself will also be informed. In the meantime if you would like more information please feel free to contact either Tim or myself on telephone number 915 6245.

Help get involved in planning the day.

2 meetings have now taken place of a group, which is looking at how women get involved in more regeneration activities and influencing decisions in the community and their own lives.

The group is working towards holding an event next year on Saturday March 10th, which will widen the discussion and highlight issues for women in influencing decisions in all aspects of their lives.

The group see this event very much as a starting point and want it to be a chance to celebrate women and to have a fun and pampering time!

If you are interested in helping get involved in planning this event, have any good ideas for activities to be put on or would just like further details please contact Shirley Anne at the Partnership Council on 9708200 and monitor the action plan being implemented by Social Services. However it was agreed that a group needs to be developed to include a wider range of participants, with a clearer remit and aim to be able to take forward many of the issues raised by older people at the event.

Establishing an ongoing Group to address the needs of older people- Friday 8th December 11- 1pm at the Partnership Council Office.

One of the key actions, which arose out of the 'Improving Services for Older People' conference in October, was the need to create an ongoing group, which focused on the needs of older people in the area.

Up until now a steering group has met to organise the 2 conferences

A meeting will be held to consider and agree the remit and role of the group.

This meeting is open to anyone who has an interest in the needs of older people and is interested in helping take the idea of a group further.

If you are interested in getting involved or have any suggestions please contact Shirley Anne for more details about the meeting on 9708200.

Marketing helps food businesses

Saturday 30th September saw part of the Area Marketing campaign - 'Life at the Heart of the City' hit Market Square. A food tasting session to promote eating establishments and restaurants in our area. The two aims were to support part of the business community and to help encourage people to visit the area or to change their perceptions. The day was an experiment, and as such, was a great success with up to 400 people stopping by.

We have recently received some feedback from business participants on the Life at the Heart Market Square event:

Owen Gaffney from Muchachas said "We got involved with the event after Muchachas' investors suggested organising a similar event. Having never done anything like it before, we were unsure how to go about it so the Life at the Heart Market Square event was an ideal opportunity. It was a good day out and very gratifying to meet some of our regular customers as well as people who had heard about Muchachas but never been. I'd definitely do it again should another be organised."

Richard Newland - Owner of Jamaican Ways enjoyed the day a great deal. "I love dealing with people so the event suited my personality down to the ground. It was just so me. I would do it again any time."

Karen Bentley of Absolute Organic said "We are a new business in the area so it was a marvellous opportunity to market it in a very high profile way. I wouldn't have missed the event. I think it was fantastic."

Madi Sharma - Managing Director of Original Eastern Foods - said "It was a fun day out for both the stall holders and the general public. There was a real community spirit on the day and everyone - customers and stall holders - seemed to enjoy it. I was surprised about the number of people I met, however who didn't know about the restaurants in the areas."

Madi's last point shows the value of this kind of event as we have directly accessed up to 400 people who have now discovered a new reason to visit and shop in our area.

The event went so well there are already discussions to run another similar event in 2001 when we can expand on the number of food outlets who take part and potentially expand the event to include other trades and businesses. A special thanks to all those who organised, took part and supported the event. For further information about the Marketing Project contact David Hill on 941 0963

children's Forum

Results: of survey

The findings of the Children's survey, carried out earlier this year as part of the Partnership Council's work for New Deal (Phase 2), was very well received at the November meeting of the local Area Committee - 'Going 4 wards'.

The committee discussed the issues raised in the survey and gave a special thanks to all the children and schools who had taken part. The committee also suggested that relevant sections of the results be sent to all City Council departments with a view to them considering issues which may relate to services which affect children. New Deal for Communities has also agreed £800 as a Fast Track project to print the survey so that it can be widely distributed.

A New Deal for Radford Hyson & Green

Agrees first £ Million

New Deal for Communities have announced the limited Fast Track projects which have been agreed. The total is just under a Million pounds at £957,499.

The Fast Track is intended to begin developing a number of projects, under specific criteria, which could begin very quickly. Part of the intention is to begin committing some money within the first financial year of New Deal. There is also a belief that with regeneration like this there is a need to see things being done. Fast track projects will help achieve that.

New Deal received over a hundred expressions of interest of which around 70 were proposals for Fast Track projects. Those which were not agreed within the restricted criteria for fast track are being put on the waiting list for discussion over the next few months.

On the right is a list of projects which were agreed for Fast Track. They are all designated as revenue funding (i.e ongoing costs) but a few also received capital expenditure (equipment, buildings, etc). These are indicated.

Pauline Davis, head of the New Deal for Communities staff team said:

"The main message that the NDC team wish to get across is that we are at the very beginning of the 10 year programme.

Fast track funding is a very small proportion of the money available and we want to encourage local residents, businesses, voluntary sector organisations and front line workers to be thinking about how they can get involved".

The NDC office will be moving just before Christmas to a new location. The new office is at Provident Works, on Newdigate Street. This will provide the team with more space and a large meeting room. The NDC team will be sending out contact information shortly. In the meantime anyone wishing to get further information about NDC can contact them on telephone 978 8553.

Working Together to Improve Health

Nottingham City Central Primary Care Group & the Partnership Council

The Partnership Council and the Primary Care Group are working together to involve all sectors of the local community in improving the health and well-being of the local population. The Partnership Council works with local people and service providers to promote the development of more responsive services and the Primary Care Group is an organisation which provides primary care to the local community.

The Partnership Council has established a multi-sector Health and Well-being Steering Group over the last few months to influence the policy development, commissioning, and delivery of local health services. This model has proven to be successful in developing social service provision and improving the appearance of the local area.

The Primary Care Group has developed a concept of 'City Villages' the idea of which is to bring people together from all walks of life to see how they can work together to improve the health and well-being of their community. The 'Villages' that have been identified are: - Arboretum Area, Dunkirk, Forest Fields, Hyson Green, Lenton Flats, Lenton Sands, New Basford, Radford Triangle, Southwold Kennington and Whitemoor.

Everyone is welcome to be involved in any of the groups - the next meetings are:

Police Warning!

Local Police have asked us to ask householders to beware of a new burglary scam being used during late December evenings. Apparently a bearded man has been fooling many people by pretending to be a Police helicopter. After flying onto the victims roofs he then gains access via the most direct route and then takes various items - particularly foodstuffs and drink.

Rumours that the man also leaves gifts behind has been scotched by local constabulary as all the victims have so far indicated that they purchased the presents themselves - often at some great expense and after endless hours of shopping.

People are advised to use the identikit photo fit shown right. If anyone sees the offender they are asked to panic.
