SIS role examined

August 11, 1986

Some Government MPs are putting pressure on Prime Minister David Lange to change the way Security Intelligence Service interception warrants are used.

Labour came to power with an open government policy which promised, among other things, to repeal the parts of the New Zealand Security Intelligence Act which had the Prime Minister rather than a High Court judge issuing interception warrants.

Mr Lange now refuses to discuss the matter.

His only comment was written across a list of questions on the subject which had been given to him: "I do not intend to comment on these matters again. All have been covered previously".

The civil liberties section of the open government policy says that "Labour will repeal those portions of the New Zealand Security Intelligence Act which authorise the Prime Minister — rather than a High Court judge — to issue an interception warrant".

Now the Labour caucus justice sub-committee is pushing for the change to be brought in.

Mr Lange met the sub-committee on July 24, and the issue has been put on the Government caucus agenda.

Subjects put on the caucus agenda move slowly up, and caucus simply hasn't reached the SIS question yet.

The caucus sub-committee is chaired by Eden MP Richard Northey, and its membership includes left-winger Helen Clark, MP for Mt Albert.

Mr Northey said that the impetus for a change to the issue of interception warrants came from the sub-committee.

Progress

He said that "before the next election you would want to see some progress on it", and that Mr Lange did not "see any particular problem" with having the warrants issued by a judge.

Just when the change will come though is uncertain. Sources say some members of the sub-committee "are in a hurry" to have the law changed.

They see the measure in the manifesto and are asking why the change has not been made.

But Mr Lange is said to want to wait for quite some time before making a change.

"Given a second term he might be relaxed enough for it," said one Government MP.

Labour would like to ensure that the SIS is strictly an anti-terrorist organisation, and before the end of the year New Zealand will have been visited by the Pope, Indian leader Rajiv Ghandi and Israeli Prime Minister, Shimon Peres.

All three are prime targets for assassins, and the visits will be an opportunity to monitor the effectiveness of the SIS.

It would give Mr Lange, the Minister in Charge of the Security Intelligence Service, time to assure himself that he is happy with the SIS as it is.

It is also not definite, if a change does come, that the job of issuing warrants would go to High Court judges.

Caucus might want a higher authority, and give the task to Court of Appeal judges, or have the issue of warrants subject to endorsement by both the Minister in charge of the service and a Court of Appeal judge.

The latest in the non-sexist language list

(NZPA-Reuters—Copyright)

Washington

A group concerned about women's rights is urging writers to rid their prose of sexist stereotypes by refraining from such words as "kingpin", "weatherman" and "coed".

A four-page "guide to non-sexist language" from the project on the status and education of women provides a long list of dos and don'ts for the non-discriminating writer.

The project, run by the Association of American Colleges, advises authors, "breaking away from sexist language and traditional patterns can refresh your style".

"With a little thought, you can use accurate, lively, figurative language in your classrooms (and) publications . . . and still represent people fairly," it said.

The project offers general rules for non-sexist usage, such as using plural nouns and pronouns, alternating male and female pronouns or using them both in a text, such as, "to the best of her or his ability".

Its forbidden list, (and suggested substitutes), include:

Businessman (executive), cameraman (photographer), craftsman (craftsperson or artisan), draftsman (drafter), fireman (firefighter), headmaster (principal), kingpin (key person or leader), manmade (manufactured or handmade), night watchman (night guard), policeman (police officer), salesman (salesperson or sales agent), sportsmanship (fair play), statesmanship (diplomacy), weatherman (weather reporter or meteorologist).

It frowns on such words or phrases as: male nurse, authoress, aviatrix, coed, maid and waitress. In their place, it offers such unisex substitutes as: nurse, author, aviator, student, housekeeper and waiter or "wait person".

In the project's book, there should be no mention of the "founding fathers", and no one ever went on a "maiden voyage". Instead, children should learn about the "pioneers, colonists, patriots, forebears (or) founders", and ships go on a first or premiere voyage.

"Man-to-man defence" also draws a flag from the project. It suggests "one-to-one" or "player-to-player" as substitutes.

Art

It was with great disgust I viewed the latest display at our Art Gallery. The one particular exhibit that was appalling — I really don't know how the gallery had the gall to hang it, let alone the person who thought it up had the cheek to present it.

The exhibit was headed "The Taranaki Underground". I cannot write any more of the design as your paper would not print it. Think it could bear the police to look at same as it is an affront to decent people; I am sure the police would take it down without asking, if they viewed same.

And the council is thinking of charging entrance fee — do you mind!!

Letters

I hope this letter will see the said exhibit removed forthwith. It has not done anything to enhance our gallery. Get rid of the filth. No wonder the youth of today think they can do as they wish when such filth is allowed to be hung — what a nerve — and is regarded as Art!

SUNDAY NEWS, August 10, 1986

THE jailing of a 17-year-old for an obscene note on a note-pad is a sad over-reaction.

Six weeks in prison would have done nothing to reinforce in the young mind of Raymond Matsiutama respect for the judge who handed out the sentence or the justice system in general. He has now been released from on bail pending an appeal against the sentence.

The public has not been told what the obscenity was — it was probably nasty, crude and insulting. The fact it was written at all while a party of employment scheme workers were at court for observation is unfortunate.

Judge Callander's patience was no doubt sorely tried by the laughter of the group and the whole incident.

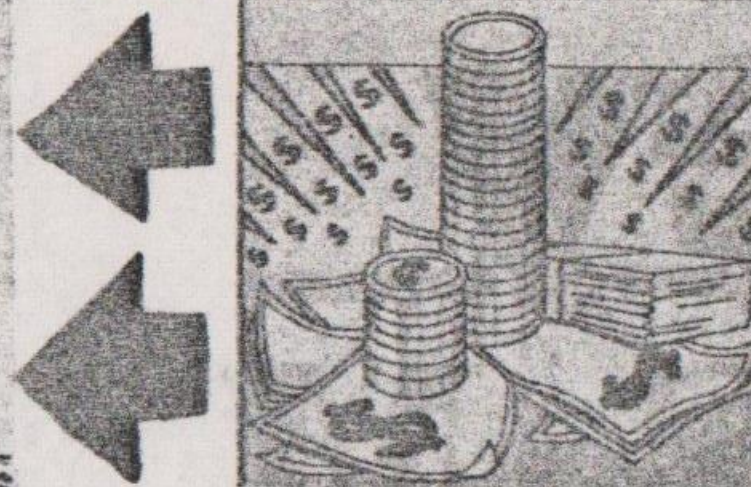

No-one can condone Matsiutama's childish behaviour, but whatever the message he doodled, the punishment hardly fits the crime.

Nothing diminishes respect for the law more than court sentences seen by the public as either scandalously light or harshly punitive.

There is public disquiet about this contempt of court sentence.

Justice must be seen to be done, but we believe this 17-year-old has paid too great a price for his stupidity.

SCIENTISTS at Colorado State University have developed a new breed of mini-pigs which weigh in at less than 30kg fully grown.

"You never saw such tiny little pigs," squealed laboratory director Linda Panepinto.

But the pint-size porkers won't be used as food or lovable pets.

No. They've been bred exclusively for research and nasty medical experiments.

Let's drink to that

WHEN is this anti-alcohol campaign that we've been hearing about for seven years finally going to happen?

I've got some slogans all ready: "Lessen the liquid in your life," "Kiss a non-drinker a day," "Drink drink, go to the shrink," "Brain damage can be embarrassing." So here we are, all organised.

What is holding up the media? It could be the attitude of the Government. We know what its slogan is: "Raise your glasses to the middle classes."

Blast kills punk

Computer centre shattered

TOOTHOOTER

Police believe a tattooed punk rocker died when the bomb he was trying to plant at the Wanganui computer centre exploded early today.

The bomber, believed to be about 20, died instantly.

Parts of his body were scattered up to 65 metres away by the blast, which destroyed the armoured glass main doors of the centre.

Police have not yet identified the man, but say his facial features are distinct and among the remains they have an intact finger.

Among the debris scattered for some 30 metres by the blast, police found a red waterproof carryall with the remains of a detonator and a battery pack. Police say this suggests the bomb was electrically set.

Detective Senior Sergeant Rob Butler said police believed the man arrived in Wanganui by bus yesterday. They had been told a young man dressed like a punk rocker had boarded a bus saying: "I'm going to Wanganui to do something frightful."

Sergeant Butler said freshly painted graffiti had been found in a public toilet opposite the computer centre. It was believed to have been painted by the bomber.

The graffiti reads: "We have maintained a silence closely resembling stupidity." This was followed by an anarchist sign and the words: "Anarchy peace thinking."

The message was all in large capital lettering and written in black paint from an aerosol can.

A black paint aerosol was found among the debris outside the centre after the blast.

Mr Butler said a fresh tattoo on the upper part of the man's chest said: "This punk won't see 23. No future."

Police were today trying to establish a motive for the bombing, to identify the dead man and to find out if anyone else was involved in the venture, said Mr Butler.

The type of explosive used has not yet been determined.

The bomber was wearing a sou-wester, a light cap and a fawn showerproof overcoat over dark trousers, and tramping boots with steel caps. He had a dog-collar choker round his neck.

The force of the blast shattered the armoured glass doors at the main entrance of the centre and windows in a nearby veterinary clinic.

Two security guards inside the centre who were standing 4m away from the blast were blown off their feet.

One of the guards told police he saw the man approach the entrance and bend down. As the guard reached to activate a remote speaker in the foyer and ask him what he was doing, there was a flash and an explosion.

A policewoman who saw the man in Wanganui two weeks ago said she particularly remembered him because he was wearing safety pins with razor blades attached in his ears.

No ears were found among the remains today.

Police superintendent Bryan Dean said he had never before seen a body so mangled.

Mr Butler said police knew the identity of punk associates of the man where the bus originated from last night. He would not name the town.

In Auckland today tattooist Mr Merv O'Connor said it was possible he had tattooed the blast victim. Mr O'Connor said he had tattooed similar wording on a dozen punk rockers.

The chairman of the State Services Commission, Dr Mervyn Probyn, said extra security precautions had been taken at key Government installations.

He added that even had the Wanganui centre been destroyed, there were contingency plans which would enable the system to be operating again in a matter of days. Duplicate computer records were held elsewhere.

The Minister of Police, Mr Couch, said inexperience probably caused the death of the bomber.

He said the death could have been a case of suicide or a case of inexperience. "I believe it's inexperience that caused his death."

A State Services Commission spokesman said the Wanganui Centre was designed to resist a blast similar to the one that occurred this morning.

The commission's computer services division assistant general manager, Mr Bill Whittet, said the design may have saved the life of two security guards who were just metres away when the explosion occurred.

Although the main armoured glass doors were shattered by the blast and the guards blown off their feet, the armoured glass around their cubicle in the foyer was undamaged.

Mr Whittet said all but essential staff needed to keep the computer centre running had been asked to stay home today "to keep them out of the way of the police and Ministry of Works staff who are rebuilding the foyer of the building."

Today's blast was the first incident at the controversial computer centre since a petrol bomb was thrown at the building prior to the Springbok game in Wanganui last winter. The cocktail did not go off and only burnt a shrub.

A VICTIM OF NEW ZEALAND'S ABSURD CENSORSHIP LAWS

I am 44 years of age, a N.Z. citizen. I am a qualified accountant (A.C.A.) and a member of the N.Z. Society of Accountants. I am a law-abiding citizen. I have never been convicted of any crime. In fact I have never been inside a court. I have one instant fine for exceeding the speed limit and perhaps two or three fines for parking offences.

I have a personal interest in erotic material which affects no one else as I do not pass any such material on to others. I believe that, at my age, I should certainly have the maturity to deal responsibly with such material.

Given the foregoing, I was severely shocked by an incident which occurred late last year. I still find it hard to believe that, in New Zealand, a government department has such wide powers — and can employ such terrifying tactics — in relation to the suspected importation of erotic material, especially when this material, being a single video cassette, was obviously for my own personal use and not for supply.

At approximately 6pm, shortly after I had arrived home, 3 customs officers arrived on my doorstep and said they wished to discuss a Kings Cross newsletter addressed to me which had been intercepted in the post.

I arranged for my wife to take my children to another part of the house.

Then they explained that they had intercepted an empty video container and that they believed the tape itself had been sent separately at an earlier date. A search warrant was waved at me and I was told that if I did not present them with the tape they would carry out a search of my house there and then.

To my questions regarding what my rights were and what the implications might be, they were very evasive.

Obviously, I wished to avoid a search being carried out in the presence of my children, so I agreed to furnish them with the tape. When I went to get it, I was accompanied by one of the officers who wanted to check to see if I had any other tapes as well.

I was then asked to provide a written statement. It was implied that they would not leave the house until they had this. At this stage they had been in my house for almost two hours and we had still not prepared our evening meal. I wanted them out. I gave them a statement, much to the later distress of my lawyer.

I feel that in such a climate, any New Zealand citizen must hold a grave concern for his or her civil rights — to say nothing of the waste of taxpayers' money used to employ three senior customs officers at overtime rates to track down what could only be an isolated misdemeanour.

NOW DOWN TO BUSINESS

UNEMPLOYMENT

FORGET IT, LET THE BASTARDS STARVE

YES SIR

WE WANT JOBS

THE ROYAL TOUR

WE NEED MORE MONEY FOR ALL THE FOOD.

INCREASE THE TAX ON THE U.E. BENEFIT

CANT SIR

WHY IN GODS NAME NOT

BECAUSE WE DONT HAVE BENEFITS ANY-MORE SIR

WELL WHERE DOES ALL OUR MONEY GO?

WELL...

IT SEEMS TO BE SPENT ON ROYAL TOURS...

WHAT ELSE

POLICE AND RELIGIOUS MEETINGS

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

GET OUT OF THE COUNTRY

YES A HOLIDAY

NO GET OUT, "LEAVE"

WHAT

WHAT

YES, THE AMERICAN BANKS WE OWE CASH TO HAVE DECIDED TO TAKE OVER NZ SINCE WE CANT PAY THEM

NO AMERICA DIDNT INVADE NZ IN 1988 THEY STARTED TO INVEST IN NZ YEARS AGO, AND NOW THEY'RE CASHING IN, MONEY IS MORE POWERFUL THAN NZ REALISED

UNDER CONTROL BECAUSE NZ LOOKED INTO THE ARSE OF AMERICA, TURNED TO STONE AND TRUSTED THE REAL THREAT

A: NO.

Q: DO AUTHORITARIAN NUCLEAR WEAPONS PEOPLE LIKE RONNARD RAYGUN STOP MAKING THESE AWFUL WEAPONS BECAUSE PEOPLE SAY 'STOP THE ARMS RACE'?

Q: DOES MARCHING ABOUT STOP THE NUCLEAR MANIACS?

Q: DOES SIGNING A PETITION DECREASE THE CHANCES OF A NUCLEAR WINTER.

POWERFUL GOVTS DONT LISTEN TO PEOPLE

IT'S THE 80'S NOT 60'S, IT'S GONNA TAKE MORE THAN 60'S STYLE PROTEST TO STOP THE NUCLEAR SITUATION IN THE 80'S OR 90'S (IF THERE IS A 1990'S) 'START TO FUCKING WAKE UP'

An old and deadly disease, nearly forgotten by this generation, still lies smoldering in the rodent populations of the world, kept in check by strict health controls and natural barriers. Wars, modern transportation, and the rapid growth of cities have combined to help it make a feeble comeback. Here is the giant question: What if it were to hurdle the barriers that contain it, and return again in FULL force?
