Pretty Police Exposed

If you go down to the woods today - watch out - you're likely to run into something more dangerous than the Teddy Bear's Picnic...

Nottingham 22/4/97 11.45pm

A reliable & respected community figure has just rung out-right! with news of illegal police operations in the Nottingham area. At last we got to yell 'hold the front page!', pulling the existing lead story to bring you this late breaking news.

In the wooded area of Colwick Park popular with dog owners, adjacent to the 'Starting Gate' public house, the pretty police are at it again - allegedly.

Several local gay men have now reported plain clothes police using private rather than police cars and working a two shift system to entrap gays.

Their usual modus operandi is to expose themselves, make sexual propositions then frog-march their victims out of the woods to the waiting cars whenever they're taken up on their offers.

One of our sources reports being approached by 'an attractive young man with his flies open', who asked him, 'what are you into?' Recognising him as one of the people who arrived with the last plain clothes police shift he had no hesitation in telling the agent provocateur that he 'was into going home after his lunchtime walk'.

We have approached the local Police for their comments, asking why officers are inciting people to break the law and why they are wasting public time and money in carrying out purely cosmetic PR exercises with the gay community.

We also wonder why gay people are paying an average of £45 each every year in council tax to support a police force that abuses us.

Making the Dream Come True...

Recently the Nottingham Out House Project committee invited tenders from consultants to take the project through the final phase from dream to reality.

From 5 applications they selected Fourth Action a 2 woman partnership - named after the European Union's programme for gender equality. 'It seemed like a good idea at the time', says Romi Jones, one of the partners. The other half of Fourth Action is Julia Lyford - and because of the vast amount of work to be done and short timescale they've called in long term associate Frankie Williams to work on the project too.

All three women are experienced community consultants with a background in the voluntary sector and were selected for the breadth & depth of their joint experience on similar projects.

Very aware that a lot of people have contributed a lot of work to the Out House project over the years, they're keen to build on this and work in a real partnership with the committee and the wider LGB community to take the vision forward. 'We know we can do it', says a confident Romi, 'we've done it before. The community knows what it wants - our job is making it happen'.

It isn't all plain sailing though - the OutHouse committee has no legal status & can't sign the lease - but they are in the process of registering as a Provident & Friendly society.

Building on the '96 questionnaire, Fourth Action will be using direct contact, focus groups & open meetings to help the project meet community needs. It's always a tricky point in the life of a group when it stops just being an idea and starts having legal responsibilities like a building and workers.

'There's a lot of work to be done in a short space of time', said Romi, 'but barring delays in establishing the group's legal status - which are beyond our control - things are looking good for the planned September opening'.

THE CULTURE

More culture than you can shake a stick at this month. Let's kick off with the London L & G Film Festival on it's regional tour. Don't miss surprise hit of the season - It's In The Water - take one traditional Texas town where the men are rugged and macho and the women have power shoulders & big hair (we're talking Southfork folks) - start a rumour that there's something in the water making those good old boys and sweet young things feel awfully queer - and you've got an acutely observed satire on the righteous right of America - a funny feelgood movie for the whole (pretend) family.

Junky Punky Girlz (Anita tries to balance US pop-teen culture, her traditional Indian heritage AND getting her nose pierced) feature in the Girls in Shorts programme along with some other intriguingly titled shorts - Why I'll Never Trust You (in 200 words or less) for example.

And naturally there's a matching programme of Boys in Shorts with 6 short films from around the world (& Belgium!). Saint looks at the traditional image of the execution of St Sebastian - uncovering the sexual undertones beneath the glorification of this beautiful boy's tortured body (...and this is the one from Belgium folks! Not so dull after all maybe!).

Not to be confused with the full length feature Sebastian from Norway (Yes I know - nearly as bad as Belgium isn't it). This film has been shown in schools to around 50% of Norway's teenagers. Why?

Because it's an intelligent, gently humorous look at developing teenage sexuality. Suddenly the beautiful Sebastian thinks he is falling in love with his best friend Ulf ... long lazy summer days ... a stolen kiss ... Well go and see it if you want to know what happens next.

Plenty more goodies - Mum's The Word, Skin & Bone, Work, The Escort and more, get a programme from your regional arty cinema.

On the small screen start looking out for Channel 4's SITCOM WEEKEND due to be screened in May/June with some classic sitcoms including the fabulous Father Ted and Julian Clary presenting Has Anyone Seen My Pussy? billed as a romp through the back passages of British sitcom. Looking - appropriately enough - at how music hall humour developed into the double entendres of Frankie Howard et al. Less predictably there's the as yet unscheduled Tickled Pink looking at how gay sexuality has infiltrated the cosy world of American sitcom & the hopes & fears of generations of gay writers, actors and audiences. Producers & writers examine the long drawn out flirtation with gay storylines and how that gels with the admen, TV executives and right wing activists. It sounds really interesting - ring C4 and ask them when they're going to screen it. Their Press Office number is 0171 360 8444.

Lesbus Tour 97 arrives in Sheffield for it's only show in the region on June 3rd performing their new musical comedy Hotel Paradiso for a women only audience at the Library Theatre Sheffield. Lesbus is part of the Lesbians Unlimited Foundation a non-profit making group established to stimulate contacts and arts activities between lesbians throughout Europe. Hotel Paradiso is set in a holiday centre where women are trying to create the perfect lesbian holiday - with hilarious results. Tickets £4/£2 available from Women's Cultural Club and Independent Bookshop Sheffield 0114 2500071.

NOTT Dance '97 - the highly acclaimed festival also hits the region with a stunning collection of performances with a gay flavour. May 21 Slippery When Wet Jeremy Robbins blends balance, badinage and ballet into an outrageous & erotic bathtime ritual mixing traditional circus skills with images from queer culture... a striptease that goes from 0 to 100 in seconds ... and just keeps going. May 27 Exessories American choreographer John Jasperse flies in from NY to perform - exploring styles of dressing sensuality and movement - what is male - what is female - what is identity - how do we see ourselves? May 27 Tranatlantic Javier De Frutos in a provocative travalogue through all that is gay and glittering in America. May 30/31 Beyond the Walls for Men Imalta Dance Co. A unique international collaboration with an all male cast mixes Western & Indian dance to create an amazing open air spectacle. Free NOTT Dance brochure 0115 941 0773.

Paul Smith - local lad made extremely good features in Paul Smith True Brit an exhibition with a difference at Nottingham Castle Museum from 15 May - 31 Aug. Giving a unique insight into Paul's eclectic design approach - there's everything from an installation based on personal design notebooks to a video compilation of the past 9 year's fashion shows.

Which all ties in very nicely with Fashion Frenzy later in the year when punters get a chance to create costumes and hats and then see their designs sashay down the catwalk. To find out more get on the free mailing list Marketing Dept Nottingham Castle Museum and Art Gallery NG1 6EL

Leicester's Phoenix Arts offers a cultural feast this month too(see ad right). And if you're going to see Basquiat try and make it the May 27 performance introduced by Professor Nicholas Zurbrugg who places the work of this seminal New York 'Warhol' artist into the context of the American avant garde. David Bowie playing Warhol too grin - what goes around comes around.

Not on their ad but equally worth a look is another chance to see Ken Loach's Land and Freedom May 7 an emotive Spanish Civil War drama that sold out last time it was screened here. Also cult classic Quadrophenia May 17/18 and of course the sensational Mark Ravenhill Faust. May 2/3.

Also at Phoenix this month the Upfront Comedy Club with a fresh new line up of rising stars from the comedy circuit, including Gina Yashere (Jonathan Ross Big Talent Show/A Force) Richard Blackwood (Club Class) and the unpredictable Patrick Young. Perhaps they're also trying to 'grow their own' because there's a brand new comedy performance course for women coming up in June too contact Marie Brennan for details 0116 255 5627 and Phoenix Box Office for programme details and bookings 0116 255 4854

Contrary to rumour and much to their fans delight The Very Good Rock & Roll Band are not dead, disbanded or anything else nasty beginning with D. And to prove it they'll be delivering their unique blend of Rock, theatrics and hysteria at the Maze North Sherwood St Nottm on May 23. If you haven't seen this incredible ten piece all girl band try imagining a cross between The Beverley Sisters, Showaddywaddy and Elvis - or better still go and see them. Sharing the bill is the ever popular impressionist and singer Kelly Wilson and Australia's 'King of Comedy' Phil Davey details 0115 947 5650

Derby's Metro Cinema is also showing Flirt May 16-20. Hal Hartley's latest offering shot in New York, Berlin and Tokyo - running the same basic storyline through the three locations, altering the gender age and sexuality of the protagonists. All three stories are based on a flirt who eventually has to decide whether it's time to make a commitment or end the relationship. Sharp witty dialogue and an interesting juggling with the theme. Call me old fashioned but I liked the Berlin based gay take on the story best.

Gossip/Soap/Sitcom lovers may be interested to learn that the longest running she or isn't she? debate has reached the end of the road. Yes Ellen DeGeneres has come out at last!

That's her sitcom character Ellen, of course. In a two part cliff-hanger, (milk it for all it's worth, sweetie!), Ellen comes out to her therapist played by none other than Oprah (this episode must have a bigger budget than Waterworld) and is befriended by a cute lesbian café singer played by k d lang - who just happens to be a close personal friend of Ms DeGeneres in real life. The first part screened in the US on April 30 and will be heading our way in due course. That's if anyone still gives a ...

Finally lesbian contemporary artist Bren Yau presents her final year degree show at the Bonnington Gallery Dryden St Nottm May 30 -Jun 7. Her work is basically about sex and sexuality and deals with diverse re-interpretations of women's sexuality. Bringing a lesbian perspective to desire and all it's manifestations from the phallus to basques and high heels. The work includes video, film, animation, super 8 and a sound installation... & well worth a vist.

from DJ Siraker

If you've missed the hype for the new Michael Jackson single Blood on the Dancefloor you must live in Outer Mongolia. A brilliant slice of pop leaning heavily on the 80's style Billie Jean funk riffs and a real club monster.

Check out the dancefloor damage of those incredibly up-for-it Tony Moran mixes. Stomping beats, loads of Italian pianos and catchy handbaggy commercial club mix. The Fire Island mixes go deeper underground with a surprisingly accessible hard house mix that's a real floor filler.

Last year saw rumours of a Greatest Hits Remix album - instead we got History - now History In The Mix finally sees the light of day. A collection of the best remixes plus some newly remixed tracks from vol 1. Available on CD, Cassette AND Vinyl (f you want it - ask for it).

The Pet Shop Boy's latest Red Letter Day whizzed in and out of the top ten within a week - but the B side Boy Who Couldn't Keep His Clothes On is still going down a storm clubwise. If you ever lay your hands on a copy of the Danny Tengalia mix - hang on to it. Only available on promo vinyl, destined never to be released and already changing hands for real money on the collectors market. Mixes like Madonna hitting a flamenco frenzy with strong hints of Domino Dancing no wonder DJs are begging for these mixes to be released as the next single.

Gary Barlow releases Love Won't Wait shortly - by Madonna & Shep Pettibone - pretty average with a dull but commercial garage mix from Junior Vasquez.

Check the B side of Roachford's hit Cuddly Toy. Enormous with mixes by Mark Pichiotti, a Retro mix reminiscent of Take That's Relight My Fire. It should have been the A side - it's storming the clubs and getting all the airplay.

Dublin's changed a lot over the last five years. There are five gay saunas, several gay bars, some very lively club nights and a lot of friendly mixed places too.

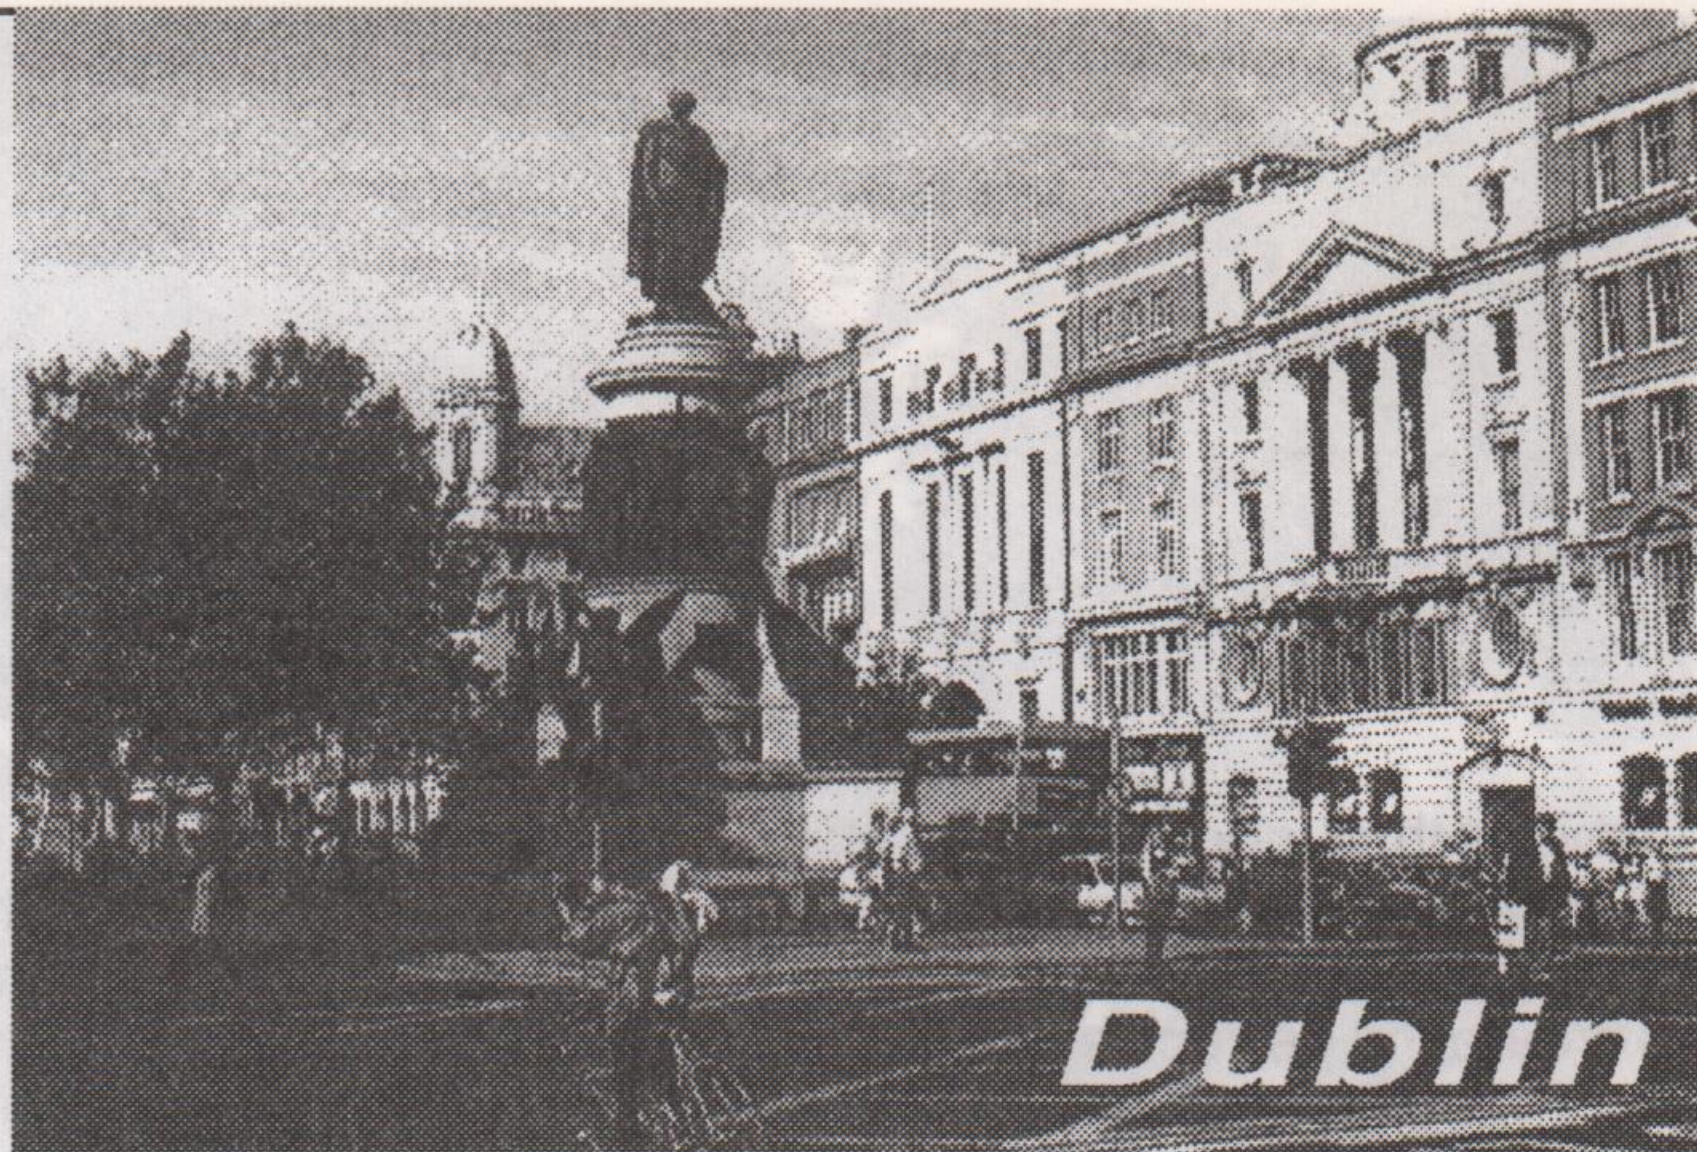

The George is probably the best known gay pub mainly men with dancing upstairs at weekends. (The floor shakes visibly!). It's not cheap Thurs-Sat £3 b4 11 & £5 after - and drinks go up by about 50p. It's a very traditional venue. The night I visited there was a fairly sad Mr George heat hosted by a drag queen who'd time-warped in from around 1972. So much for gay culture being on the cutting edge!

Across the river Out on the Liffey faces onto the river - just up from Inn on the Liffey - now a gay sauna. Out is a popular bar very lesbian/gay mixed and worth the walk to get there.

Nearby you'll find The Winding Stair bookshop whose upstairs café provides good cheap food with plenty of vegetarian choices. Nothing over £2.30, I don't know how they do it.

Most of the bars in the Temple Bar area are mixed but friendly and this is a fun area to explore day or night with its vividly painted buildings and interesting and exotic shops - Soho on the Liffey!

Clubs - Da Club Tues, Pod Fri/Sat, Wonderbar Satpm-Sun am. Pod is a converted railway tunnel - great atmosphere. Wonderbar is the BIG venue.

Dublin is a beautiful Georgian city full of cultural treats. The National Museum with its vast collection of bronze-age gold. The Literary Museum - more famous writers than you realised were Irish. At the Gallery of Modern Art out near Phoenix Park - the first thing you see is an 18th Century study of a naked boy, eyes closed in ecstasy one hand tangled in his hair - beautiful!

Trinity College shouldn't be missed - walk off a city street under an archway and travel back in time.

And of course there's the Guinness brewery where the free samples seem to taste better than anywhere else.

Dublin is Shopper's Paradise. Everything from exclusive luxury shops to surprising & bargain packed markets. We found one stall selling nothing but olives in every possible variety and combination - yummy!

We stayed at Frankie's Guest House which is quite cheap for Dublin and very cheerful from £20 singles, £30 doubles. Frankie himself is very friendly and helpful and a mine of useful information. The rooms are comfortable and it's very conveniently located.

We traveled Ryanair from Birmingham International for just £59 return inc tax. You cannot say fairer than that! Dublin's a great place for a week-end (or preferably longer) break - I can't wait to go back. Tony Challis

Virgin Births!

According to the Sunday Times (13.4.97) Lesbian Britain is Baby Booming! In fact, social researchers suggest that children brought up by lesbians are emotionally well adjusted and happy. Stifling the urge to yell 'yes we know that' one has to acknowledge that at last lesbian mothers are getting some good press.

The more naive journalists appear to be slightly taken aback that lesbians want to be parents at all, while the more lascivious hacks seem hell bent on getting the graphic detail about the mechanics of lesbian conception. It comes as a bombshell to all of them that some lesbian women continue to conceive in the time honoured fashion favoured by our heterosexual cousins.

But for any number of reasons, a spot of horizontal jogging with a promising and athletic PhD candidate is not an option for many women. For many, the answer is donor insemination. Maybe in the racy south this service is widely available to lesbians but a quick ring round the outright! region tells a very different tale. Neither Nurture (Nottm's leading edge fertility facility) nor The Park Hospital treat single women or lesbians in a relationship. However Leicester's Royal Infirmary and BUPA Assisted Fertility Unit are more broad minded. A spokesperson explained that they felt it was important for them to follow both the letter & the spirit of the Embryology Act - which states that no social group should be discriminated against. Despite hate mail, an internal enquiry and questions in the House of Commons concerning the moral fibre of the staff, these units still judge EACH CASE on its merits.

The future welfare & happiness of the child is the paramount concern of staff members - who recognise that good parenting isn't genetically linked to heterosexuality.

But without the support of local registered clinics a lesbian wanting a child has little option but to turn to self insemination.

We examine the potential pitfalls of self insemination in part 2 of Virgin Births next month.

Transgender

Gender is a fascinating subject. Without it, sexism & homophobia wouldn't exist, we can hardly imagine such a world. Babies have gender assigned to them the minute they're born, & if their physical sex is ambiguous, they may have surgery to make it less so. After all, how could they possibly manage in the world without a gender? There wouldn't be any toilets for them!

Most people have eroticised gender to some degree. Even the word "bisexual" assumes that it's important in sexual choice, although some people within the bi community reject both the word and the binary split behind it. A lot of gay politics relies on gender, although queer politics doesn't reinforce it in quite the same way.

How many genders?

One thing that mainstream patriarchal culture has in common with some brands of feminism & some gay politics is the insistence that there are only two genders - male and female. This is questionable on several levels.

Genetically it's clearly false: XX and XY aren't the only genetic combinations. Biologically it's clearly false: all human genitals grow from the same cells of the embryo, and there's a spectrum of possible development between what we call "male" and what we call "female".

Socially, we usually try to divide people into exactly two categories, even when they don't exactly fit them. Because so much of our society, even our language, is divided along gender lines, it's uncomfortable not to know what category someone belongs in. You wouldn't know what pronoun to use or what prejudices to hold about them.

But the gender "woman" includes people who experience themselves as butches, femmes, tomboys, dragkings, femmes fatales, earth mothers, traditional "feminine" women and many other flavours for which we don't have names. Even though we consider all those people as part of one group, that doesn't mean that their own sense of their gender is the same.

Some people may remember an episode of "Dyke TV" where people rated themselves according to how butch & how femme they were. They weren't in opposition - you could be, say 6/10 butch and 8/10 femme, or 3/10 butch & 1/10 femme. Afterwards some of us were exploring gender in a similar way - you could be, say, 10/10 woman, but at the same time 8/10 girl and 3/10 boy. This internal "sense" of gender doesn't necessarily have anything to do with your body, and also allows for another experience - of being neither female nor male. In that sense, most of us were a bit transgendered, even though we didn't identify as such.

Some transgendered people accept the binary model, and represent themselves as being a mixture of male and female: for instance, a male mind, or a male "soul", inside a female body, or vice versa. The medical profession seems to like this interpretation. Other transgendered people speak of more complex realities.

Bodies

The word transgender is used with several meanings, but can include anyone inclined to cross gender lines. Transsexual is the term usually used to mean specifically people who want to live full time as a gender that doesn't correspond with the gender attributed to them at birth. Like everyone, transsexuals want to live and be accepted as the gender they experience themselves. This may involve changing their body.

It can be disturbing to think of someone wanting to change their body that much. But there are few people who take no interest in that game at all. Ever felt better when you get the new haircut you want? Ever felt worse with the "wrong" haircut? What about dyed hair, a suntan, ear piercing or a tattoo? How do you feel when you get fatter or thinner? All those involve the alignment of the physical body with some imaginary picture of how you want to be. And all of them also involve other people's perceptions of you.

Who is a woman?

The idea of "Women's space" brings up particular questions. Women's space is designed as a place where we don't have to deal with "male" behaviour patterns and our reactions to them. For this reason, people who've been raised "as boys" and then want to be accepted as women are often viewed with suspicion in this context. Even though they don't experience themselves as men, they've been socialised to behave in the way that men are supposed to behave.

On the other hand, there's a huge variety of socialisation within the category we call "women". I didn't think I was a boy, but that didn't stop me identifying with male characters in fiction or taking part in stereotypically male activities; as a child and as a teenager I was sometimes mistaken for a boy. What does that say about my socialisation? Are you sure you should let me in?

And if socialisation is the main factor, does that imply that people raised "as girls" should always be welcome in women's space, even if they now live, pass and experience themselves as men?

Also, early gender-atypical behaviour may lead to reactions like verbal or physical abuse or being led to believe you're deficient in some way, which means many transgendered people have had an atypical childhood for that very reason.

Of course, the more rigid the stereotypes are, the more likely behaviours are to be deemed gender-inappropriate. Reasoning like "I knew I was a girl because I wanted to play with dolls and I didn't want to fight" makes perfect sense in some realities, but in others appears preposterous.

Some people believe that, no matter what your environment or behaviour, and no matter what your body looks like now, "Whichever gender the doctors said you were when you were born, that's what you'll always be". ("Biology is destiny".) Others believe, again irrespective of upbringing, that some "essence" of "masculinity" or "femininity" can occupy any kind of physical body.

Who's got a cock?

Patriarchal culture bases gender attributions (e.g. of babies) mainly on the presence or absence of a cock, which is seen as the presence or absence of maleness. In this paradigm, the essence of being a woman is the absence of maleness. The inclusion debate is sometimes represented as a question of whether to allow cocks into women's space, and this seems to me part of the same paradigm. Some theories go further - cocks epitomise male privilege and violence. I don't see that idea as helping women (or men) at all. It simply reinforces the traditional bullshit - such as the idea that men aren't responsible for what their cocks tell them to do.

Perhaps one underlying issue is of "proving" a genuine commitment to being a woman. The fear is: once you let one male body into women's space, what precedent are you setting? Surgery, being something no-one undergoes lightly, can be seen as the "gatekeeper" to women's space. On the other hand, using this as the only criterion is problematic. Health issues can prevent access to surgery. The financial costs make it a class issue. If you can't convince the medical profession you'll be able to fit in in your new role, they can turn you down. Also, the "state of the art" is such that people may choose not to take the risks - for instance, the risk that you'll never be able to have an orgasm again. More radically, some people don't consider that any particular body shape is required to validate the gender that they are. So besides "post-operative" and "pre-operative" transsexuals, there are also "non-operative" transsexuals, who for various reasons are not expecting to have surgery.

No simple answers

Looking from a practical point of view, the question of behaviour seems to me the one most relevant to women's space - as opposed to what the medical profession, or the law, or spiritual theory, says makes someone a woman. One question is whether someone is living as a woman and experiencing prejudice as a woman. Another, for people raised as boys, is whether they're actively setting out to challenge their own typically "male" behaviour patterns. This is not trivial, since most people brought up as men haven't been encouraged to examine their own behaviour. That's part of being brought up as a man.

Some women's groups choose to include "female to male" transsexuals in their transition period, recognising that some of them have strong social ties to the dyke community.

There aren't simple, clear cut answers, and that's a reflection of the fact that in beginning to address "who is a woman?/who is a man?", we're bringing into daylight something about which almost the whole of our culture is in denial. It isn't surprising that transgendered people don't seem to fit neatly into the categories we've got because the categories are flawed in the first place. People who've experienced life on both sides of our culture's gender divide are in a position to contribute a valuable perspective on our beliefs. This article raises more questions than it answers. So does transgender.

A spokesperson for the police said that it was true that in response to public complaints the uniformed, especially complaints from women about flashers, the uniformed operation in the area had been stepped up. As this had not had the desired effect and public complaints had increased, they had moved to a covert operation but strongly denied any that any entrapment had taken place. There have been 6 arrests so far, 2 men for indecent exposure, 3 men for gross indecency and 1 man for a sexual assault on a police officer. The officer we spoke to acknowledged that there was no heterosexual equivalent to the offence of gross indecency but said this isn't the fault of the police force - they are there to enforce the law as it stands. The onus for changing the law lies with the voters who have the power bring pressure to bear on their elected representatives for a change in existing legislation.

We are going to be contacting project working around cottaging/cruising issues in the outright! region over the coming weeks to check out the state of play and if any individuals want to contact outright! about this issue they can talk to a gay man on 0115 9520770 in complete confidence

..stop press - late extra

You have probably noticed that the last few issues have been late arriving at your usual venues. This has been due to a variety of reasons. The problem now is that we are 'stuck' about 2 weeks behind in the production cycle. To break out of this vicious circle we have decided to make the next issue a joint June/July Summer Special which will be out in early June. This should get us back on track for the following issue to be out on August 1st. Subscribers will have an extra issue to make up

London Lesbian & Gay Film Festival on tour...

...Fri 23 - Wed 28 May

The best of queer cinema this year

It's in The Water

Something is turning the rugged men and the big haired women of Texas into good ol' gays and dykes. A hilarious satire on the straight and narrow.

Girls in Shorts & Boys in Shorts

The Escort (L'Escorte)

Steve, a young tart with a heart, spices up the love life of Philippe and Jean-Marc. A potent mix of melodrama and comedy.
