LESBIAN WEEK AT LAURISTON HALL

Laurieston Hall People Centre in Scotland are hosting a Lesbian Week from 1st-8th July and invite lesbians of all ages to join them. This follows a successful lesbian week there last year, and because of the continuing popularity of Gay Men's Weeks, they feel their facilities might be welcomed by lesbians on a more regular basis.

Tucked away in the South West Corner of Scotland in an idyllic setting, the forty-roomed Hall dates back to the early 19th century and is surrounded by its own estate of several hundred acres, where they raise cattle, chickens, and grow vegetables. A community of around thirty people live in and around the Hall and they are well-used to hosting single-sex groups in a safe space. A loch, a sauna by the pond and plenty of lovely walks, complement the various activities that tend to be organised by the participants themselves.

Men as well as women live at Lauriston Hall. It is not a separatist

Charges for the week are on a sliding scale from £72 up to £140 for full board. For further information send a SAE to Laurieston Hall People Centre, Castle Douglas, South West Scotland, DG7 2NB.

When the suspension of the facilities was announced an offer was made that if suitable alternative accommodation could be found, then the costs incurred by users of the Project would be favourably considered by Nottingham Health Authority.

> Vice-Chair Jane Kokoszko said: "The decision to suspend activities was not taken lightly, but we felt that in order to ensure that our service provision was of the highest professional standards, and that effective managerial and administrative policies were in place to maintain those standards, then difficult decisions had to be made. With today's funding criteria from Statutory Agencies we need to be able to produce value-formoney of the highest level, otherwise we may no longer receive the funding. Therefore we took the decisions we did to preserve our long-term future".

Jacky King (right) describes herself as '40ish and of challenging appearance'. She has led a varied career as Art School graduate, boutique designer partner, free-lance designer in England and America, restaurateur, hotelier and Art & Design Lecturer.

Her brochure reads "The series of work in the exhibition started two and a half years ago, and is still in progress. The English language, the language of love, of needs, of feelings and the honesty of the words are the starting point. The acquaintance with the words is irresistible hence the activity that keeps the work going. Also the infinite variety and magnitude and worth of this very personal series of work. The cycle of the words produces an innate and instinctive size or shape, colours, emotions, sounds, tastes and aroma. The visual marks must be equal to the symbols of the language. The insistence of equal emphasis." Her exhibition runs at the Womens Centre Nottingham until March 10th.

LIFE IS not THE SAME IF YOU'RE GAY.

The laws surrounding pensions make it difficult for unmarried couples to plan for retirement. When you are gay, it is not only the law that makes it difficult, it is the misconceptions surrounding intestacy and trusts. In other words, if you think you may ever want a partner to benefit from your pension plan in the event of your death you cannot leave it to chance.

Your independent financial adviser should not only inform you of the costs involved of any particular pension policy, but the size, strength and past performance of the pensions office. Financial advice however, does not stop there.

To us, getting it right seems surprisingly simple. We do not charge and our service is confidential.

BRIEF ENCOUNTER

'Encounter', the ITV Religious Affairs programme, was in Derby recently looking for priests to take part in a programme about the priesthood and the Church of England. But they couldn't find any who would be interviewed. That's when Trevor Thurston-Smith stepped in to take part. A social worker, and ex-priest who left the church over their hypocritical attitude to homosexuality, he said he wanted to live his life with integrity and honesty which was not possible when wearing the cloth. The programme makers were also able to find a serving priest in Coventry who was prepared to speak out. The Bishop of Derby was interviewed too, but his views proved to be predictably reactionary. The programme goes out on Sunday 18th April, 11.05-11.35pm, ITV network.

Nottingham Out House Project is preparing to launch another festival fol-lowing last year's successful 'Out in the

The festival is likely to take place during May and early June and expects feature film, performance, art, photography, street theatre, dance, and a literary event. Anyone in the region who would like to take part in the festival is invited to contact one of the organisers. They are particularly interested to hear from amateurs wanting to showcase their talent for the first time, and are looking for photographers and aspiring performers of all kinds.

Another event in the planning stage is a May Day parade through the city by lesbians and gays in their working gear. Masks and shades will be provided for those who are coy about revealing their identity! Come with your overalls, tools, and briefcases, your hard hats and hand bags, and all your occupational accoutrements. Contact (0602) 780124.

YES TO UNISON

The three public service unions, NALGO, COHSE, and NUPE are to amalgamate shortly to become UNISON, which will make it the second largest union in the country. Steve Bedser, from the NALGO Lesbian & Gay Self-Organised Group has some thoughts on the matter:

"Things have now shifted gear in NALGO; we aliens will have to replicate ourselves in this much larger union of over a million. It's a time to encourage lesbians and gays in the other two unions to join us in becoming a very much larger self-organised group. For members of COHSE and NUPE this will be the first time they have had access to a campaigning group for lesbians and gay men within the union. NUPE and COHSE

WHAT'S UP DOC?

Our regular medical consultant is indisposed. This month our locum Dr Unshaw talks about syphilis.

Dear Doctor.

A friend of mine who I had sex with several months ago has been diagnosed to have syphilis. I haven't any symptoms and no discharges. I would hate to go to my GP unnecessarily. It would be so embarrassing. Do you think I'm infected? Jason.

Dear Jason.

It is possible to have syphilis and not know it. A discharge is not a symptom of this disease. The first stage can be mistaken for a sore, and if you're taking other medications the symptoms may not be apparent to you. But if it's there, it won't go away by itself. Up to six months later it enters its second stage and then becomes much more serious. You don't need to be afraid of being embarrassed by telling your GP. You can go to your nearest Genito Urinary Medical Clinic and have a completely confidential examination and blood test and your GP won't know. But do not wait too long.

HOW WE MET

Ben and 'Oright Babe'

After years of being a single parent there had been little time or money to meet people or build a relationship. By the time the children were off my hands it was very obvious to me and those around me that I was both looking and feeling old. I retired early and expected to spend the third span of my life alone; that didn't exactly depress me but I secretly hoped I'd meet someone special. I have a spiritual dimension to my life - I suppose one might say I'm religious. But I'd virtually given up churchgoing because I felt in conflict with the Church over the Gay issue.

One Sunday I felt the need to worship. I saw a phone number in Gay Times advertising the Metropolitan Community Church. As I made the journey there I began to wonder why I was bothering but on my arrival I received a tremendously warm welcome. Some gave me a hug, then a man twenty years my junior gave me a hug and a kiss on the cheek. He said, 'Oright Babe'.

general building including:

40, Windermere Road,

I drove home from the Church service, unusually elated with the words 'Oright babe' ringing in my ears. I tried to visualise the faces of the others I'd met but 'Oright Babe' kept pushing his face forward through the windscreen. My usual reserve went out of the window. Within two weeks I was writing my thoughts and feelings to him when, joy upon joys, 'Oright Babe' phoned me.

I found myself explaining that the next Sunday my children would be staying and I would be late at the service after seeing them off. "Will you wait for me?". "I'll wait babe" came the reply.

That was six months ago. Maybe I'm deluding myself when I say I think I no longer look old and I certainly have no difficulty spending a couple of hours dancing.

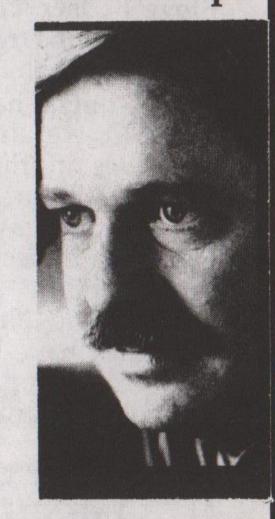

'Oright Babe' has been the kindest, most loving and considerate person I could ever wish to meet. He doesn't very often get fed up with my stuffiness but I know when he does, because the 'Oright-Babe' can have a slightly different inflection. I am no longer sure if his accent is Brum, he is half Geordie, half Irish and lives in Birmingham. Sometimes I don't understand a word he says but often we don't need to say anything to be able to communicate. Never a day goes by without a phone call one way or the other. He took time off to be with me at Christmas, and New Year was spent together, staying with my son and his wife, who obviously liked him. We plan a holiday together in the Summer and we cannot imagine a future which does not involve us both and we plan to be living much closer together soon.

PACKED TO THE GILLS

300 panting women packed Nottingham Women's Centre, for Blind Date recently, raising over £500 profit to fund local parenting events. Sharon, Ange and June chorused: "Women came out of the woodwork, from Derby, Lincoln, Boston (not USA!), Leicester and elsewhere to gawp." The Centre was transformed into a veritable fairyland strewn with hearts and flowers. Sue (left) chose Rachel (middle) in preference to a nun and after a whirlwind getting-to-know-you session of fifteen minutes they both returned to tell a frothing Cilla how it went. But, sadly it didn't look as if they would get knotted on this occasion. Ms. Black was a vision of loveliness in a fetching acrilic two-piece oatmeal ensemble. Her outfit was complemented by black leather (shoes) and hair to match, which offset her peach and brickdust complexion and violet mascara, which at times made her look like an escapee from Wentworth.

The event proved to be one of the biggest crowd pullers at the Womens Centre for a very long time.

PROMENAIDING TO £13,000!

For the first time the event was covered on local television in addition to wide regional press coverage.

Plans are already well in hand for Promenaid '94.
