LOOKOUT!

March April May 2006

Issue 38

Editorial

It should be time to change the little picture to the one with the daffodils ambitiously popping their heads up under the jubilant rainbow but as we write there are bulletins about 27 inches of snow on the American eastern seaboard. WOW! Received wisdom in climatic matters used to say that what New York had dear old Blighty would have 6 weeks later. So if you're making holiday plans for mid April better make them to stay here if you're into skiing but make it Gran Canaria if you want some winter sunshine.

March heralds the end of the yearly cycle as far as astrologers are concerned. Pisces is the 12th sign and ruler of the 12th house: characteristically dreamy and more concerned with the psyche than the self.

It's inhabitants are the most unworldly, their joint rulers are nebulous Neptune & generous Jupiter making them cool to the point of frostbite yet loving romantics at heart. Their symbol is the depiction of two fishes swimming in opposite directions yet inextricably joined at the hip. Anatomically, they are associated with the feet so you can see it's last, last, last, without exception. What they really need is a kick in the pants & who better to give it to them than headstrong Aries full of the joys of blossoming April and intensive me, me, me syndrome. Spring really will have arrived by then, the clocks will have gone forward and we might actually be getting home after work with a couple of hours of daylight to spare.

Important stuff about Lookout

So, with all this potential for fecundity around; snow-drops, pussy willow catkins, bouncing little baby lambkins how about considering some new purpose in life, some project to keep you busy and all your mates entertained. Surely we're not the only ones who miss Eternity and before that Cellos? A once a month women only disco would be wonderful and/or someone prepared to re-invent the Women's Café.

There are a couple of ideas for one-off events later in the year but don't let that stop anyone from investigating new venues or off the wall ideas. We could also do with some fresh ideas for Lookout itself. You don't even have to commit to regular involvement (although we would dearly love someone in the team who could look after the advertising — just write about something that you have done, feel passionate about, or can recommend. You'll find a couple of examples on page 4 of this issue.

We are currently looking into the possibility of having a web site for Lookout so if you would like to get involved or have some ideas for the format please get in touch.

As you can perhaps imagine, funding Lookout can be a slightly hair raising balancing act and to this end the production team would really appreciate being joined by someone who could spare just a few hours a month to help generate some much needed cash through advertising. This exercise has the added benefit of bringing together women who may be starting out in business with those of us whose jobs hamper our desires to get stuck into those necessary D.I.Y tasks.

Also, if you are in the process of moving, could you add Lookout to your list of people to inform? We regularly get half a dozen or so postal copies returned because people have moved away.

Please, please, please, if you know about something that might interest others or if you would like to make suggestions for regular features or you're changing address, just let us know by emailing

Focus on Civil Partnerships

Two of our regular readers have very kindly written about the very positive response they had to their desire to have a public acknowledgement to their relationship—both at a commitment ceremony and later at their civil partnership.

Our special year

The first part of last year was spent planning our commitment ceremony, which we had set for 8 September 2005. This date had been set as we thought the legalities of same sex partnerships would have been legal by then. But the House of Lords decided differently and it was too difficult to re-arrange.

Contrary to what we had anticipated, it was a wholly positive experience in terms of the organisation ranging from the chauffer to the ceremony venue, the caterer to the bridal wear shop and the printers to the honeymoon venue. Our excitement at being able to celebrate being together seemed to be shared by everyone involved with the arrangements.

We had the Commitment ceremony and the reception at the Council House, Market Square, Nottingham. Accompanied by a harpist and a string quartet we had a Reception party for 70 guests. Afterwards we went back to Harts Hotel for the night. The next day we set off for Southampton and our cruise to the Ukraine. On arrival, the P & O honeymoon package was already laid out in the room - flowers, chocolates and chilled champagne. So far no overt homophobia. Three weeks later we got back to England. Back to work and preparations for our Civil Partnership ceremony on Wednesday 21 December. It was set for 10.00am at Shakespeare Registry Office. As we got closer to the date we realised we were to be the first partnership to be registered at Shakespeare Street as the office didn't open until 10 on Wednesdays. Again, staff attitudes were really positive and they were keen to make us welcome. We had 7 guests to witness our registration and the staff even gave us a bottle of champagne to celebrate history in the making!

We then went for a meal before going to Ragdale Hall until Xmas Eve.

On both occasions people seemed to be very happy to share our happiness at being together and being able to celebrate that. We know that this is not always the case.

When our photo appeared on the 'Weddings' page of the Nottingham post, it elicited a few letters to the Editor challenging that decision. The Editor has now agreed to have a separate section for 'Civil Partnerships' to prevent further offence!

Back down to earth eh?

Barclays Bank, ever ready for a spot of free marketing whilst casting their beady fiscal eye around for opportunities to maximising their profits, teamed up with Stonewall to take an 'infoshow' on the road in order to help people find out all they need to know about Civil Partnerships. Well, on the road actually amounted to 4 major gay centres in the whole of the UK, one-day from 5:30 to 7:00pm in central locations in Brighton, London & Manchester were held in February.

Only Birmingham is still available on March 8th.

To book a place or for more info please contact peter.knight@stonewall.org.uk

Personally, I can't help but feel that they weren't going to have time to advise many people in a total of 6 hours for the entire country but I guess it serves as a reminder to check things out before signing up.

Everything you need to know about Civil Partnerships – officially!

The government's Women and Equality Unit has published a series of guides to civil partnership in England and Wales – a flyer listing key points of how to register a partnership, an 8 page booklet summarising issues covered by the legislation, and a 38 page detailed guide. The detailed guide covers what civil partnership is, how to register, special circumstances, immigration, family relationships, social security, tax credits, child support, pensions, tax, employment and tenancy rights, death, when things go wrong, and how to end a civil partnership. It also includes contact details for other organisations for information about finding where to register, tax, benefits and pensions, issues for children, and lesbian and gay support organisations.

There are separate guides for Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Unit's website has a set of frequently asked questions, and samples of documents such as a civil partnership certificate.

The flyer, booklet and guide can be downloaded free in pdf format from the Women and Equality Unit's website at

Cycling Dykes

We are now planning regular rides on one Saturday and one Thursday each month, as well as meeting up in town monthly for a drink & to plan future rides. Some members of the group prefer longer off-road rides, while others prefer shorter rides along quiet roads or well-made paths, so we try to cater to different preferences by having different types of rides.

New members are always welcome. If you're interested in joining us, please contact Alison on 07773 182724 (voice or text) or email: arussell@ntlworld.com

13 went Mad, in a room for 12, in Amsterdam

All sorts of entertainment was on offer in this vibrant cosmopolitan city.

Not sure if it was by chance or design but we were there on the second Saturday of the month, which sports a women only disco for the over 30's – great atmosphere & highly recommended at only 4 euros to get in, although they have a strange drinks policy involving only being able to hand over tokens at the bar which you've previously had to buy on the door. Great for the staff; no faffing with change but considerable potential for "rounding up" on the shorts. Imaginatively called Vrouwen 30+ (women over 30) it was held at COC.

Plenty of other queer listings for all persuasions in the Time Out guide.

The hostel was the one located centrally of the two in the city and the weekend package was excellent value for money with extras thrown in. Check out their webi www.stayokay.com or www.hihostels.com - it's the Dutch version of YHA.

Oh yeah, and there's canals and museums and stuff for culture vultures too.
