BITS AND PIECES

On page 5 you will find some Press Cuttings which have appeared recently. If anyone sees anything similar which might be of interest then please cut it out and give it to me (David Edgley) or hand it in to the Switchboard Room at the CVS.

The results of the 10 Pin Bowling match are as follows:-

1. Mick 2. Stuart 3. Jerry 4. John 5. Vincent.

*****

As Vincent will not be able to travel to Nottingham in the future with anything like the frequency that he has been able to until now, he has found it necessary to resign as Social Secretary. Volunteers for this job will be ardently embraced.

*****

More entries for the Sponsor an Opera competition have arrived:-

"The Cunning Little Vixen"	by The Quorn Hunt or 20th Century Fox
"The Turn of the Screw"	by Pozidrive or the Prison Officers' Federation.
"I Puritani"	by The National Festival of Light
"Un Ballo in Maschera"	by Y Fronts
"Noyes Fludde"	by the Meteorological Office
"Mary Stuart"	by the Scottish Widows' Life Assurance Society
"The Woman without a shadow"	by Pond's Vanishing Cream

It has been suggested that we compile a list of group members' interests and possibly their professional occupations - these, of course, to be obtained only from those who want to provide them. The purpose of this is two-fold:-

- 1) To find out just what interests we have and locate those which people share (metal detecting? corndolly making??)
- 2) So that those who want to may offer their professional skills to those in the group who might need them.

"I'm afraid there's been an error, Mr Thackley—you've been cured in mistake for another patient."

For those new to Nottingham or to NGSG the CVS is 31a, Mansfield Road and is the premises of the Nottingham Council for Voluntary Service. As well as the events listed on page 1, people meet regularly at the CVS on Mondays and Thursdays from about 8pm onwards. Nottingham Gay Switchboard works from the same address on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 7-10 pm. Phone 46714.

Nottingham Gay Switchboard has updated its information sheet and a copy has been incorporated into this edition of NOGSOG News.

Report on sexuality divides Methodist meeting

By Martyn Halsall,
Churches Correspondent

The Methodist Church yesterday concluded a six-year study of human sexuality by declining to adopt a divided report or agree on pastoral guidelines to implement it.

The report, the third produced by Britain's largest Free Church in the past four years, was simply noted and commended for study, without plans for future debate. That decision leaves the Methodists without a policy beyond acknowledged "that no definitive judgment is yet possible."

Most of the dissatisfaction about the 22-page report, covering the whole range of human relationships, concerned a short passage on homosexuality.

The working party which drafted the report declared unanimously that there was no reason to deny church membership, office, or ministry to those who were homosexually orientated, but it was divided about whether homosexuality should be physically expressed.

Several speakers at the conference, meeting in Plymouth, warned of defections from the church if the report was adopted. The Rev Arnold Skelding, from Lincoln, said: "I don't think anything is more disturbing to the Methodist people . . . than the fact that this appears to be the definitive statement of the Methodist Church."

"There is a deep disturbance: I wonder how many have already resigned on this issue."

The Reverend Hoare, from Sheffield, said the report's adoption would give the impression that the church was supporting the majority on the working party.

The majority argued that the physical expression of homosexuality within a committed relationship "is to be accepted as a choice which Christians may responsibly make."

The Reverend Ian Lunn, from Bristol, the working party chairman, said the church already included those homosexually orientated as members, local preachers, and ministers "often among us at considerable personal cost of stigma, loneliness or stress."

Police to end 'spy patrols' on gays

By Alan Dunn.

Police in Greater Manchester will no longer use plain clothes officers to patrol public lavatories in the search for homosexuals committing indecent acts.

Professor Michael Jarrett, chairman of the Campaign for Homosexual Equality said: "This new policy will be welcomed by everybody who feels that police time would be better spent on trying to solve more serious crimes."

But a police spokesman said: "This does not represent a fundamental change in policy. All our activities are under constant review and this is the result of one of them."

Plain clothes officers loitering in public lavatories in search of homosexuals have attracted controversy over the years. Gay groups have alleged that some officers have behaved provocatively.

Courts have heard stories of officers climbing on walls to peer into cubicles, and allegations that spyholes have been drilled in walls.

Professor Jarrett said: "We have felt for a long time that the Manchester police have been bloody-minded in their surveillance of lavatories."

A Supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary. Volume III, O-Scz, edited by R. W. Burchfield (£55).

Dr Burchfield and his team have granted the poet W.H. Auden's "great ambition to get into the OED" as first user of two words for homosexual practices. They are "plain-sewing" and "Princeton-first-year."

The dictionary warns, however, that the first word should not be confused with a different form of plain-sewing which is common among nuns and "is still looked upon as an important part of a girl's education."

Cardinal flays the Gays

From George Armstrong
in Florence

AFTER a truce lasting for at least two decades, the archbishop of solidly Communist Bologna has attacked the city fathers for having given two rooms to the local gay association, to be used by their 625 members as a social centre.

The two rooms are situated in a tower next to the mediaeval Porta Saragozzo, one of the old city gates. It was at that gate that Mayor Renato Zangheri welcomed Pope John Paul to Bologna last April.

However, each year a locally venerated portrait of the Virgin Mary is carried in procession and traditionally it stops at the gate to receive homage. That could be an explanation for the archbishop, Cardinal Antonio Poma, feeling impelled to break his truce with the Communists.

"We find ourselves faced with the decision which in itself is a grave insult to the religious feelings of many Bolognese," the Cardinal said in his telegram to the mayor.

Homosexuality, he went on to say, "is objectively immoral and in conflict with authentic human dignity. The exultation and the exhibitionism of such behaviour only increases its gravity."

When it was suggested months ago that the Bologna gays should be given those facilities, some people in the area said it was unwise, as there was a school close by and "they might give the children sweets containing narcotics."

In yesterday's march, to celebrate Gay Pride Week, the marchers handed out sweets to passers-by of all ages.

Sex change for opera conductor

HAZEL Vivienne, the 48-year-old conductor who is head of the English National Opera's music staff, has changed her sex and will conduct next month's revival of Rossini's Barber of Seville as Victor Morris.

Miss Vivienne has been with the company for 23 years, becoming head of the chorus in 1964 and of its music staff in 1975.

PUBLIC REACTION AND THE MEDIA

Have the media overplayed their hand in their sensationalising of the Tresstrail resignation? Perhaps I am not getting an overall view, but from the responses of friends, people at work, neighbours and people that I hear talking in the street, it seems to me that many are questioning whether it should have been thought necessary for Commander Tresstrail to resign. What is more, every fulmination of the Flog 'em and Hang 'em branch of the Tory Party, every slur of the John Junor school of journalism and every pathetically inept cartoon like that in our own dear Evening Post adds to people's anger at Tresstrail's treatment. I found it interesting to learn that letters protesting about the Post's cartoon had not only been sent by CHE but by outraged local gays whom one would never associate with campaigning for gay rights.

After that, dare I admit that I do find the Guardian's cartoon (shown here) rather funny.

"I'm heartbroken. Eugene has gone to live with the chap who positively vetted him."

As an example of what the average gay-on-the-scene can do when sufficiently incensed might I cite the following example:-

A man informed the Switchboard that the Police were blocking off the wash basin area of a local toilet to construct a hideaway from which they could entrap gays. They were even going to the trouble of improvising a pseudo workmen's conversation of the "Hand me the monkey wrench, Maurice" type whenever they were interrupted during construction of the hideaway. The man was sure that such behaviour by the police could not possibly be legal and he wanted verification of this. He was given the Gay Legal Advice number, but was told by the Switchboard that it almost certainly was legal and that a possible ploy might be to embarrass the police by making their subterfuges more widely known. In this instance the Press seem to have been on our side, because after informing a newspaper in the Chesterfield area the story was covered under a large headline which read something to the effect of "What the Police were doing during the Jewellery shop theft".

DID YOU KNOW

That "Ian Botham possesses a variety of balls to choose from" (2nd Test Match Commentary)

That on covering the Pope's visit the BBC Outside Broadcaster stated "Look at the crowd! They're waving absolutely EVERYTHING!"

That at my school the Head of History has a dentist called Mr. Twist, the Head of Music had a dentist called Mr. Pullet and my dentist is called Mr. Snapper.

That the following are genuine extracts from letters received by the Gas Board during conversions to North Sea Gas:-

"It has got slack with use and my husband can't make it tighter no matter how hard he tries, so for the time being we are making do with an old gas ring."

"I told my husband it was safe to leave it in at night, but he won't. If he comes to the showrooms can the lady satisfy him from behind the counter and talk him into it."

"I was told mine is no good, but if it is altered I can get the North Sea in."

Is Noggin on the cover pointing at something? Possibly he's indicating the swarms of bees that seem to be gathering ominously in four of the letters above his head.

At a recent discussion we spent a short time contemplating whether he should be given something to hold in his hand. Any suggestions will be gratefully received. Or perhaps he could be given a different message to hold or a different thought bubble ("I've got the scrolls") each issue.

Humour is a very individual thing. I wonder whether the following cartoons appeal to anyone else? They are pictures from comic strips with the captions altered.
